THE WORLD OF WOMEN
Hands Behind Head; Then
Bend Down—Down!

You may not accomplish this first day . . . but persevere.
BY JAC AUER
Slender waistlines and flat abdomens are the ideal of American women this spring.
New Spring suits won't look right, unless you get your waistline in trim.
This exercise pulls your waistline and better yet, eventually holds your waistline stretched by strengthening the muscles that do the trick.
Stand erect, feet apart, clasp your fingers behind your head and step forward with your left foot, holding your weight on this back one. Now pull your head forward, clear down to your knee on your extended left leg, if you can get it that far. You probably can't—the first day. But keep persevering. That is your aim. Straighten, stretch your head down toward your right knee.
Before you start stretching your head down, drop your head backwards onto your clasped hands. This stretches your abdomen first, then gives you more of a back stretch
as you bend forward.
Try this exercise two times for each leg, the first day.
Increase the count until you reach 10. It is one of the best waistline stretches ever used.

WHAT'S TO BE GAINED BY TELLING ADOPTED CHILDREN THE TRUTH?
By Olive Roberts Barton
Should parents tell children that they are adopted?
It is one of the most difficult problems that arise to face the man and woman who have taken a baby to love and cherish as their own.
If you had opened your heart and home to a warm little bundle of humanity, had told yourself from the beginning that from now on for evermore you were the same to that baby and he to you as if the Lord had sent him direct to your arms, and each day thereafter had strengthened that love, would you, could you think calmly of the time when the child would come home any say, "Aren't you my really truly mama?"
Love Is Just the Same
We women with our own children have an idea that it is a different kind of love with which foster parents regard the adopted baby. Those who know say there is no difference. A woman said recently that she loved her dead niece's baby, that she had adopted, better than she loved her own.
This, however, is not the point.
A foster parent is anxious—almost overly anxious—to do what is best for the child. And wonders whether or not it is best for the child to know the truth.
Why Need the Child be Told?
Also, if it is best, at what age he should be told. Is it better for his parents to tell him before the news comes from schoolmates, or to take a chance and wait until his judgment and reason will come to the rescue and soften the blow.
Again, is it necessary to tell him at all? Why need he ever know?
Why cannot his parents reach old age secure in the love a son would give his real parents, even though he has married and has other interests in life? If he knew he were adopted this knowledge might affect his relationship more or less with them. In a busy man's life even blood parents often come in for just such time as he can give them.
This matter of telling the child
I believe must be decided by the parents themselves. Advice in such a sacred and intimate matter
I feel would be profane.
But some thoughts might help to decide which is best.
If it can be possibly arranged, a change of residence from the district where the adoption has taken place is helpful, because it obvi-ates much of the danger of the news being told and spread by other families and reaching the child through the cruel chatter of other children.
Parents Alone Can Decide
A little child is happy in the thought that his parents are his own. There is no harm, rather the contrary, in keeping him in ignorance. Through childhood and adolescence the matter should rest with the parent. His judgment is the thing to guide him.
But unless there is a vital reason for telling, and nothing is to be gained, why should he be told?
Later on, when he is fully mature, and has begun to make a world of his own, it may seem wisest for him to know. Not only may some question of law come up, but he is entitled, I think, to know the truth about himself.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONICA O'DARE helps to support her mother, younger brother and sister by working in a drug store in the small town of Belvedere. Her older brother, BILL, plans to marry ANGIE GILLEN as soon as Angie divorces her husband. Monica is in love with DAN CARLSON whose wealthy parents do not approve of her. SANDRA LAWRENCE, pretending to be Monica's friend, tries to win Dan from her. Sandra becomes angry at a maid and her father's chauffeur and dismisses them. A few days later when she receives a telephone message saying her father is badly hurt Sandra hurries to him only to find herself the victim of kidnappers.

CHAPTER XXV

Sandra's voice, in spite of her desperate efforts to keep it cool, had a note of hysteria. "Where are you taking me now?" "Where you keep your mouth shut!" The woman in the heavy veil, the one who had joined her captor a moment before, spoke hoarsely. Sandra had a fleeting impression she had heard that voice before and that its owner was attempting to disguise it. She shrank from the glare of eyes behind the heavy drapery of gauze. There was something wildly intimidating about that stare.

They conferred for a few minutes outside the closed door while the girl on the couch, her feet still bound, allowed her eyes to rove frantically about the room, seeking some means of escape. There seemed to be none. The window was locked and barred—she could see that. Even if her shackles were loosed it would take some superb tactics to get out of this fetid room. Fool—fool she had been to come alone! They had got her into this trap with maddening ease.

Sandra's thoughts roved to home and her father. He would be reading that soiled note presently. If she knew him, he had already telephoned the police. Then what? Would his life also be in danger? Pretending to shrug off this notion as pure melodrama, Sandra raised her head proudly. The man re-entered and, stooping, loosened the ropes which bound her slender ankles together.

"Come along, you!" he said, not unkindly. "We're steppin' out of here."

Sandra brushed against the woman in the passage as she followed. Again she had a sense of imminent menace, of an almost tangible hatred.

The man indicated she was to sit beside him in the rickety sedan.

Before stepping into it Sandra glanced about quickly to fix the scene in her mind. In the darkness she could see only a rotting fence and dooryard. The whole place was like half a hundred discouraged farms tended by renters in the countryside. There was nothing to distinguish it.

"Never mind your lookin'," the man cackled. "We're not comin' this way again."

The veiled woman clambered into the back seat and Sandra felt their boring eyes upon her.

They rode, bumping and awaying, for what seemed to the girl hours although when she glanced at the dial of her watch she saw it was only 11 o'clock. Curious they didn't trouble to blindfold her! She knew this road—it was the Embury Turnpike. Wouldn't it be the simplest thing, she thought, to scream—to attract the attention of some passing motorist? For all she knew alarms might have been broadcast already regarding her disappearance.

As if reading her thoughts, a rasping voice from the rear said harshly, "No funny business now. I've got a gun!"

They turned left into a lane lined with poplars. The moon was rising and the landscape lay cool and sharply etched before them, like a back drop in a theatre. Black against the sky rose a clumsy house, sprouting half a dozen chimneys. Dark. Sinister.

"Wait here," the man commanded his henchwoman. He jumped out and went about to the back of the house, returning presently in disgruntled mood.

"Key's not here," he cried to the woman in the back seat. Sandra had an almost insane impulse to laugh. It was so absurd, this criminal protesting innocently that he couldn't get into a house because he hadn't a key.

The woman wrenched the car door open, evidencing her intention of searching for the missing key. But instead she paused, stilling a scream. Lights were blurring the roadbed of the lane. A car was coming toward them at top speed.

"It's the cops!" yelled the man. "Let's go." He flung himself into the driver's seat. The starter whirled—died. Again and again he tried it, desperation in every move. But the car bore down on them.

"Run for it!" said a hoarse voice. Sandra saw the veiled woman trip over a log. Then the lights of the car shone full into her eyes.

"You big—!"

Sandra looked up, half laughing, half crying. But instead of the friendly blue-coated figure she had expected to see, she found herself staring into the eyes of James, the chauffeur.

"You all right?" His voice sounded relieved. The woman, having picked herself up, now began to run. In a trice, the long-legged James had overtaken her, was shaking her soundly.

"Little sap!" Sandra heard him saying. "Didn't I tell you?"

She could hear angry sobs, a protesting murmur. Hetty! It was Hetty who had been her captor, whose burning glance of hate had eaten into her very flesh.

Recovering her composure completely, Sandra swung herself over the side of the car.

"Would anybody," she inquired coolly, "tell me what this is all about?"

James turned. The habit of respect was strong but even Sandra could catch the note of dislike.

Grudgingly he muttered, "You threw us out without jobs. You wouldn't give us even a recommendation. It wasn't our fault."

Sandra flushed. "She was impudent. She didn't deserve it."

James put a restraining hand on Hetty, whose huge forehead boded no good to Sandra. The man, her original captor, had by this time disappeared, drifted into the darkness somewhere.

"You better not talk that way," James said defensively to Sandra. "You better be glad I come along in time to save you. When she" (he indicated the struggling Hetty) "gets a mad on she's a sure enough wildcat. She was bound to get even."

"I'm not goin' to let her off like this, so easy," panted Hetty. "She was sweet on you. She tried to get her hooks into you and when she couldn't, she gave us both the air."

James intervened. "You know as well as I do, Miss Lawrence, we can't get jobs without we have a recommendation."

"They didn't want that—they wanted money," Sandra informed him icily. "They've sent a note to my father demanding $50,000." James groaned. "Honest, Hetty, did you do that?"

The girl nodded, defiant.

"You little nit-wit!" He whirled on her. "Do you know what a mess you can get us into? You and that no-count cousin of yours."

"I don't care," Hetty said sulkily. "I said I'd get her and I did. She's not as smart as she thinks she is. Anyhow we got to go through with it now. She knows who we are and she'll get the police after us if we let her go. Don't be such a chicken heart, Jim. She doesn't care what happens to us. Why should we care about her? She'd let us starve to death."

There was danger in the atmosphere. Brooding hatred. The smoke of revenge. Two pairs of eyes stared at the girl in the Paris frock.

"What good is she anyway?" Hetty raved. "Never does a hand's turn. Makes mischief wherever she goes. What right's she got to live?"

Sandra saw something flash in the darkness. She heard a muffled report. She watched, fascinated, the struggling figures.

James turned his head sharply. "Get out of here," he barked. "Run for your life. And if you tell about this night—if you get Hetty into trouble—you'll be sorry for it, that's all."

Sandra ran, stumbling in the dark, almost sobbing. Briers tore her thin stockings and once she fell into a pool of ooze, sinking to her ankles.

At last she reached the main road, a bedraggled figure. Which way to turn? She did not know, so took the right, hoping it led toward home. Her thin shoes were hopelessly inadequate. Her body felt as if it had been beaten.

Several cars passed, their lights almost blinding her. Her breath was torn from her now in gusty sobs, every one burning her parched throat. On and on she stumbled along this road that seemingly had no turning.

At last she heard the purr of a motor going in the same direction. She was frightened rather than relieved, hearing men's shouts. What new horrors did

GRAIN CONTROL

PRODUCING NATIONS IN AGREEMENT

London, July 6. The four greatest wheat producing countries of the world, Canada, Australia, the Argentine and United States, have reached an agreement on grain problems, on the formula put forward by the American representatives at recent discussions.

The great purpose behind the wheat producers' move is to increase prices. Wheat which once sold for $1.60 per bushel, has been selling in recent years for one-third the amount. Even the famous hard wheats of Canada have failed to maintain a better yield.

It is understood that as a result of the newly reached agreement, the plan will be submitted to European wheat producers who have undertaken not to augment grain acreage or production. The consuming nations, it is understood, have promised to reduce tariffs against wheat when the price rises in consequence of production restriction.

Wheat prices have strengthened already, though they have probably been affected by adverse crop reports from the United States and elsewhere as much as by the hope of international sales control.

Canada, Australia, Argentine and the United States will exercise a double control; that is, they will govern exports and internal stocks with vigilance.

The agreement has not as yet been signed, but since Australia has signified assent it is understood that the pact lacks only formal approval to be effective.

The wheat plan to which the four countries have agreed at present does not specify any definite figures. These would be filled in if the European countries and consumers give assent to the proposals.—Reuter.

LUANTUNG ZONE

CONFLICTING NEWS FROM NORTH

Tokyo, July 5.
From Dairen it is learned that a Chinese-Japanese agreement, regarding details involved in the evacuation of the fighting zone, has been signed. The agreement refers, inter alia, to the distribution of Chinese troops assigned to patrol duty and other work, and also to through traffic on the Peking-Mukden Railway accompanying the withdrawal of Japanese troops.

Earlier reports from Peking state that a hitch occurred in the Dairen Conference to settle the Luantung question, and as a result the Japanese are demanding various concessions.

They ask, first, that the Japanese authorities be permitted to station a certain number of military inspectors in the Luantung district after the Japanese withdrawal to the Great Wall and; second, a board consisting of Chinese, Japanese and Manchukuo representatives to be set up for joint control of the Lutai-Shanghai section of the Peking-Mukden Railway.

The Chinese delegates have referred the demands to Peking, which have been telegraphed to Nanking for instructions.

In the meantime, the Chinese delegates have been ordered to postpone their return to Peking.

The train service between Peking and Tongshan was resumed to-day after a suspension of nearly two months.—Reuter.

you can use all the fancy graphs you've got into the bargain.

"I know you can mention a lot of objections, but it can be done."

"Beg Pardon"—Speak up a bit, lad!

"What should I do to control overgreediness?"

"I have got one or two good ways for dealing with that."

"What is wrong with this—Allow all the very rich chaps, a good amount of wealth—all that they can usefully do with but none for gambling on industry. Then every one of them with more than this amount, if they are not prepared to spend the surplus put 'em on Country's Greedy List."

Then read this List over on the Wireless every night.

If they are so hard faced that they can stand that, and all the talk there will be about 'em—tie a brick round their neck and drown 'em, they are no good.

"I do not propose hurting anybody or doing anybody any wrong, but we can't let any chap that lives in our world play a selfish game of 'Dog in the Manger'."

"And another thing! We can't allow these international financier chaps to upset all the world when they start scrapping amongst themselves trying to pinch each other's bit of power. Kicking up a dust and causing a regular hullabaloo."

"I know these fights—I've been in 'em."

"Do as you have a mind,—when they start you can't keep out."

"They sort get you by the scruff of the neck, and say—'Come in lad'. 'It's going to be a right good rough and tumble—free for all.'"

But I've always noticed that when the battle's over and everything has subsided and peace and quietness reigns again, that in addition to having been in the fight, I've been well plucked in the bargain.

"Nearly always after one of those does the Bank comes and puts another Monkey on our Mill."

"Well done," essays a solitary sympathiser—"Give it to them. You've got the idea. Don't let them drag you into orthodox economic arguments, because a lot of 'em system—for every logical and reasoned argument you put before them, they will polish an illogical one, and make it look logical. They stew in their own juice."

They have something to lose, they think. But what they do not realise is that they have more to gain than they have to lose.

The method of Joe Thorpe is probably right—ridicule—who wants to listen to Economics—who wants to talk Economics—who wants to read Economics—proverbially known as the most depressing subject a student can possibly face—who wants to write economics?

The Crisis we are facing today is worse than we faced in 1914, except there are no Guns—yet. (Mr. Cope's articles on the World Crisis, embodying his Spending Money thesis will shortly be published in pamphlet form.)

AIR MAIL PLANS
CLEARED UP

entertained the hope that the requisite permit would come in the near future.

He explained that Britain was a party to the International Air Convention and reciprocal agreements between other countries who were party to the Convention and Britain enabled planes of those countries to land on each other's soil. America took no part in the Convention and in view of this, special permission had to be obtained before an American plane could use British soil as a landing place. That was the position in Hongkong.

Mr. Bixby also mentioned that for the time being only two round trips would be made weekly starting from Canton to-morrow and returning from Shanghai on the 11th. This was necessitated by reason of the fact that they had only two planes available. This scheme may be altered in the future but as to the certainty of that he could not say. It would depend on how their plans worked out under the present scheme.

Questioned concerning the passenger rates, Mr. Bixby stated that those arranged so far were only tentative as they were not certain of the actual mileage the route would entail. At present they had fixed the fares at $270 from Shanghai to Canton and $250 from Shanghai to Hongkong. In respect of a round trip there would be a reduction of 12½%, so that a flight from Shanghai to Hongkong-Shanghai would be $460 and from Shanghai-Canton-Shanghai $495.80.

The Sikorsky plane in which Mr. Bixby and other officials arrived here yesterday left for Canton at ten minutes to nine o'clock this morning. They will leave Canton early to-morrow morning on the inaugural flight to Shanghai.

When inquiries were made at the Colonial Secretariat, it was stated: "We have received no word yet either from the Secretary of State or from the British Minister to China that a permit has been granted either to China National Airways to use Kai Tak as a port of call in an air mail service."

The official explained that negotiations were proceeding between British and Chinese interests for the conclusion of an agreement, the keynote of which would be reciprocity.

When this agreement was duly signed, sealed and delivered, British planes would be able to operate in China and planes of Chinese companies would be free to use Kai Tak.

great sympathy with Japan and thought that the League of Nations was showing insufficient appreciation of the difficulties faced by Japan in view of the anarchical conditions prevailing in China, but as events went on, he had been forced to the conclusion that Japan was putting herself increasingly in the wrong.

The action of the Japanese militarists in Manchuria was irreconcilable with three solemn international engagements. He asked the Government whether the Lytton suggestion might not take the place of Manchukuo in reconciling the interests of Japan and the sovereignty of China.

LEAGUE'S POSITION.
Captain Anthony Eden, replying to Mr. Lansbury, declared that the League had no reason to feel ashamed of its record. It was not a super-State and could not go beyond its powers.

As regards an arms embargo in the Far East dispute, all countries did not possess equal legislative powers to enforce it and until they did, it was impossible to take steps to apply an arms embargo anywhere.

As regards British interests in Manchuria, there were consular officers there though there had been no recognition of Manchukuo.

DISARMAMENT.

As regards disarmament generally, Captain Eden admitted that there was a risk in signing a Disarmament Convention at the present time, but there was also a risk in failing to get an agreement on the Convention. It was necessary first to bring such agreement to Europe as would give the nations sufficient confidence to sign the Convention.

That needed the assistance of the whole of Europe, particularly of those who complained of an inequality of status.

WAR DEBTS.

Sir John Simon, winding up the debate, referred to the war debt to the United States and said that the approaching negotiations, the exact date of which had not been fixed, would deal with the whole subject and not with any particular instalment.

President Roosevelt himself made that much clear when he asked Britain to make representations in Washington as soon as possible.

REVISION AIM.

The British Government would, said Sir John Simon, seek such revision of the existing agreement which would be compatible with the revival of prosperity.

The Conservative member, Mr. Nunn, expressed the opinion that China would welcome any friendly action to put her house in order and asked whether it was not possible for Britain, America, Japan and France to combine to get something done.—Reuter.

SUGAR PLAN FAILS.

RESTRICTION UNWANTED BY CHINA INDUSTRY

London, July 5.

China has rejected the Cuban sugar restriction scheme, on which is sought an international production undertaking in an effort to raise prices. In a memorandum to the Sugar sub-committee of the Economic Conference, China states she is prepared to consider participation to alternative schemes.

The memorandum points out that the dwindling-Chinese production can scarcely survive foreign competition, unless methods of cultivation and separation are improved. The proposal to prohibit the erection of new factories or to increase production in existing factories would involve a greater sacrifice than would be bearable to the China industry in the present circumstances.—Reuter.

strong couple to prevent them from winning the title.

Mme. Mathieu and Miss Ryan joined Miss James and Miss Yorke in the semi-final.

Miss Ryan found herself in another semi-final bracket during the day, when she and E. Maler, the Spaniard, holders of the Mixed Doubles championship, beat R. Nunol and Miss Noel in straight sets.

PLUCKY FIGHT.

The Anglo-Japanese pair put up a very plucky fight. Nunol did the work of two, and frequently left his opponents standing with spectacular middle-court smashes and cunning drop shots.

The other Anglo-Japanese partnership, Miki and Miss Dorothy Round secured a place in the last four when they scored a brilliant victory over P. D. Turnbull and Miss Helen Jacobs.

The winners carried off the first set with ridiculous ease, and Turnbull and Miss Jacobs responded in like fashion in the second. Any idea, however, that the final set would be a close affair was quickly destroyed, Miki and Miss Round making light of their task.

The day's results as cabled by Reuter were:

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

One case of animal rabies, from Kowloon, was reported to the local health authorities on Tuesday.

The P. & O. liner Rajputana is arriving in the Colony on Wednesday next, according to schedule, and not on Monday as inadvertently stated yesterday. The s.s. Takada which is late, is arriving on Monday.

The following is the monthly return, for June, of the St. John Ambulance New Territory Medical Benevolent Branch, showing the number of cases treated at each station:—Cheung Chow 1,885, Kam Tin 1,078, Shatin 705, He Tung 846, Shataukok 1,000, and other stations 1,000. Total 10,000. The maternity cases number 75, and there were twelve admissions to hospital.

AID TO HUMANITYHAMBURG'S BIG CONTRIBUTIONCURING TROPICAL DISEASES

Hamburg's proud claim to be regarded as the gateway that connects Germany with the rest of the world is justified for two reasons. In the first place, she is the most important seaport on the European Continent and her merchant community possesses extensive business relations with every country in the world. The outcome is that Hamburg is qualified to act as an extremely efficient intermediary in the interchange of commodities between Germany and the countries beyond the sea. In the second place, she has always been prominent in the domain of the intellect and is therefore able to communicate to other countries the results of Germany's achievements in arts and science. The work done by her in this respect is of great value to mankind as a whole and is on a part with her activities as a seaport and a commercial emporium. It is very significant—and, as it were, symbolical of this twofold function of the old Hanseatic city—that her University with its numerous affiliated institutes for the promotion of science has more and more come to the foreground during the past few years.

GREAT MEDICAL INSTITUTION.

The Institute for Marine and Tropical Diseases occupies a leading position among these institutions on account of its considerable effect upon the development of medicine in the tropical and sub-tropical countries of Central and South America, Africa, India and the Far East. It is, indeed, the best-equipped of its kind throughout the world. It is devoted to teaching, research and healing work. It was founded in 1900 by Professor Bernhard Nocht, then chief of the harbour medical service, who is also chairman of the Malaria Committee appointed by the League of Nations. For three decades he presided over the great institution founded by him, but a few years ago he handed his work over to his trusted colleague, Professor Fulleborn.

Throughout the whole time of its existence all the departments of the Institute have been in charge of eminent and highly-qualified experts who have placed their talents at the service of mankind. As regards these, mention should be made, apart from the two gentlemen already named, of Professor Muhlen and Professor G. Gleason. Every one of them enjoys a world-wide reputation. Professor Fulleborn and Professor Muhlen, more particularly, have again and again been invited by the governments and university authorities of foreign countries to give lectures and to undertake research work for them. A few weeks ago, for example, Professor Muhlen gave a large number of lectures on the work done by the Institute and on the results achieved to numerous audiences in British India, the Netherlands Indies and the Far Eastern countries.

TROPICAL DISEASES.

The work done by the Institute consists—as already indicated by its name—in the investigation of the conditions tending to produce tropical diseases and of the possibilities of curing them. Some of the means used for this purpose are: annual courses for students and medical practitioners from every part of the globe; the large hospital affiliated to the Institute; the comprehensive collection of teaching requisites; one of the best-stocked libraries in the world in so far as tropical medicine is concerned; an excellent museum; the publication of carefully edited medical periodicals, occasional brochures, and textbooks on medicine. Apart from the general department, the Institute has also a helminthological, a clinical, a chemical, a bacteriological, a protozoological, an entomological and a pathological-anatomical department.

And what is the outcome of all this scientific work? It is overwhelming in its completeness and thoroughly justifies us in saying that the Hamburg Institute for Marine and Tropical Diseases is a valuable aid to suffering mankind. It is solely due to the scientists associated with its labours that malaria can now be actually cured by plasmoquine, whilst it was formerly only possible to give some relief to patients suffering from it, by administering quinine. Other important remedies discovered and tested by the Institute are yatrene and germanine, the one being used for amoebic dysentery and the other for sleeping sickness. In addition, numerous drugs have been examined by the Institute with a view to ascertaining their effectiveness in leprosy and other infectious diseases.

FIVE SETS TO FOUR

SOUTH CHINA JUST PIP H.K.C.C.

LEAGUE TENNIS RESULTS

The Hongkong Cricket Club were decidedly unlucky to lose to the South China first string in their important "A" Division tennis league match yesterday. C. A. Wright and R. H. Wild lost all three sets and this turned the result in favour of the Chinese who scrambled home by the odd set in nine.

The Club lacked the services of Denis Hazell, who is ill with influenza and this undoubtedly affected their chances of winning. Had he been supporting Wright, they would have assuredly secured the one set necessary for victory.

L. Goldman and A. L. Sullivan reformed an old partnership and carried off two sets whilst G. W. Sewell and H. Owen Hughes performed extremely well to win the other two.

Further smashing wins by the two C.R.C. teams were features of the results and with them and South China boasting 100 per cent. records, unusual interest will be attached to the championship this summer.

Details of the results follow:

University 1 C.C.C. 8

Vines.

Crawford.

Crawford gave a brilliant display to beat Jiro Satoh, Japan's leading player, winning in four sets by scores of 6-3, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Vines played classic tennis against Henri Cochet, the French idol, and after one of the most spectacular matches of the tournament ran out winner by 6-2, 8-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Crawford, who ever since he started on the present European tour has been playing the best tennis of his career had no cake-walk against Satoh, but the Japanese was given fair warning of impending danger in the manner in which the Australian started.

Quickly finding his touch, Crawford opened up a powerful attack with withering drives to the corners. He timed his net approaches perfectly and in the first set was clearly the master of the situation. Satoh, bringing all his wonderful defensive strokes into play, endeavoured to lure the Australian into errors, but Crawford was comparatively invulnerable, reducing his mistakes to the minimum.

ALWAYS THE MASTER.

Crawford played magnificently in the second set which he won to assure himself of victory. His long reach and quick anticipation enabled him to intercept Satoh's most powerful and accurate passing drives and with crisp volleys, Crawford turned them into winning points.

Satoh had warmed-to-his-task-by the time the first set had finished and the exchanges kept the spectators on tip toes with excitement. The Japanese tried desperately hard to break up Crawford's ground strokes by indulging in delicately executed drop shots and well disguised angled half court shots, but the Australian treated the tactics with scant respect and used them as a weapon for himself.

Two sets up and Crawford allowed Satoh to take the initiative. The Japanese was not slow in accepting the opportunity and making frequent excursions to the net quickly captured the set.

COURTESY SET.

It was however, pretty well a courtesy set, for Crawford returned with all his early skill and speed to win the fourth set and match. Satoh, right off his mettle, refused to concede an inch without a fight, and the winner had to produce his best strokes to clinch the issue.

There was a dramatic atmosphere about the Vines-Cochet encounter for it has been freely expressed that this would be Cochet's last effort to "come-back" at Wimbledon.

NARROW DEFEAT—Yesterday the Hongkong Cricket Club "A" Division team suffered a narrow defeat against South China "A" in the tennis league. Above is a group picture of the two teams and opposite, A. L. Sullivan, ex-Internat, who has just returned from the Davis Cup tour.

Players V Gents Match Cancelled

IMPOSSIBLE TO RAISE TEAMS

London, July 5.

The first Gentlemen v. Players cricket match of the season which should have started at the Oval to-day, has been cancelled owing to the difficulty experienced in raising teams.—Reuter.

The cancellation of a representative game such as this for the reason given above is most unusual. The reason can probably be found in the fact that in addition to a county programme of six matches, Oxford University are meeting the M.C.C. at Lord's, Yorkshire are entertaining the West Indies at Harrogate and Cambridge are playing H. D. G. Leveson-Gower's XI at Eastbourne.

None of the University players were available as their arranged matches are over of the Varsity conflict practices, and the rest of the amateurs are playing for the M. C. C. and Leveson-Gower's eleven.

C.A.A. NIGHT FETE.

First Meeting Of Season On Saturday.

OPEN RELAY RACE.

The Chinese Athletic Association's Bathing Pavilion at North Point, the last of the concrete swimming pavilions to be opened this season, will be the stage for the Association's first swimming night fete on next Saturday evening.

Among the events in a highly interesting programme is a 150 metres relay race (each fifty metres, back, breast and free styles), open to the Colony. Entries for this event are free and those intending to participate are requested to send in their entries to the swimming secretary of the C.A.A., Mr. Lo G. Hin, of Singer Sewing Machine Company in Pedder Building.

The prizes for all events will be distributed at the conclusion of the meeting by Mr. Chan Lim-pak, the donor.

The programme opens at 7.30 p.m.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Murder at a football game! While 70,000 spectators look on, a boy dies on the field, and no one sees who killed him! That is the dramatic situation which serves as the basis for "70,000 Witnesses," the mystery melodrama which opens to-day at the Queen's Theatre.

The film is unusual and exciting.
Built up from its uniquely dramatic basis to a breath-taking climax, it deserves to stand high among both football pictures and mystery thrillers.
The fatal game, which results in the death of the star half-back of the State team, is thrilling in itself, and then, from the moment the boy staggered and drops as he is about to make a touchdown for State, the film assumes the note of sinister excitement which surrounds the solution of a particularly baffling mystery.

Walter Clark (Johnny Mack Brown) is the boy who is killed. Because of his strange actions during the game, suspicion is directed toward Buck Buchanan (Phillips Holmes), quarterback of the team and Walter's best friend. Buck, moreover, is known to be the brother of Slip Buchanan (Lew Cody), notorious gambler, who finds it to his interest to have University win the game. But in spite of circumstantial evidence, Detective Mc-Kenna (David Landau), Clark's sister (Dorothy Jordan), and others interested in the case do not believe that Buck is guilty. Both Clark's murderer and the manner of his death remain a mystery until the film reaches a sensational denouement with the repetition of the fatal game, play by play.

"Too Busy To Work."

Because he was not required to wear evening clothes, high hats, powdered wigs, or other trapping in the production of "Too Busy To Work," Will Rogers enjoyed making it. It is the attraction at the King's Theatre next Sunday.

Rogers dislikes to "dress up" and in his daily life wears the most ordinary clothes. A pair of well worn trousers, a mole-skin jumper and a white shirt minus necktie, constitute his most frequently worn outfit. He does not own a dress suit and, at public functions, his attire is invariably a blue serge business suit.

In "Too Busy To Work," he appears as a vagabond wanderer and wears a costume that fits both the role and his personality.

"Too Busy To Work" is based on a story by Ben Ames Williams and deals with the adventures of a penniless, happy-go-lucky tramp who either walks, or dies the brake beams of freight cars, from place to place in search of his daughter who disappeared
while he was fighting at the front.

The child, now a young woman, accompanies her mother when she runs away with a man in more affluent circumstances. The mother dies and the girl becomes the head of her foster father's household and falls in love with his son.

There is pathos in many of the situations in the picture, but Rogers is said to have ample opportunity for introducing the brand of comedy for which he is famous. Marian Nixon shares the love interest with Dick Powell, a recent discovery whose only previous picture role was in "Blessed Event."

"The Half Naked Truth"

Jackie, 180 pounds of five-year-old lion, was the most respected actor during the production of "The Half Naked Truth" showing at the Central Theatre to-day only. Lee Tracy, Lupe Velez, Eugene Palette, Frank Morgan and Shirley Chambers may actually have been enacting the featured roles, but Jackie held the respect of the troupe with his giant claws and menacing teeth.

The lion, claimed by Trainer Melvin Koontz to be as gentle as a kitten, has worked in motion pictures since cub-hood. He was born at Selig Zoo in Los Angeles, which specializes in producing and training motion picture animals.

"She Done Him Wrong"

Mae West has occupied a unique position ever since she first burst, sensationally, on the Broadway horizon, as writer and producer as well as actress. Now she seems on the way to occupying a similar place in pictures.

"She Done Him Wrong," which opens on Sunday at the Queen's is ample evidence of the inroad Mae West has already made in the film business. It is her first starring vehicle, her first picture, in fact, except for a bit in "Night After Night," and both story and dialogue are of her authorship. The entire film bears the mark of her individuality.

"She Done Him Wrong" is a story of the Bowery, with Mae West in the role of the voluptuous Lady Lou, who sings at Jordan's Diamond Palace and makes diamonds her career. She judges her men by the diamonds they can give her, and doesn't question where the diamonds come from.

Cary Grant adds materially to his stature as an actor by his performance as Cummings. Noah Beery and Moore, too contribute priceless characterizations, and the supporting cast includes such astute players as Gilbert Roland, David Landau, Rochelle Hudson, Rafaela Ottiano, Grace
LaRue, Fuzzy Knight, and Tammy Young.

"The Painted Woman"

Spencer Tracy is co-featured with Peggy Shannon in "The Painted Woman," the Fox dramatic photoplay, opening to-day at the King's Theatre.

In "The Painted Woman," Tracy plays the role of a roving soldier of fortune who has been all over the seven seas and tried his hand at everything, winding up as the skipper of a little pearling schooner. In addition to Miss Shannon, the cast includes William (Stage) Boyd, Irving Pichel, Herbert Mundin, Raul Roulien, and Laska Winters, John Blystone directed.

a section plays with every other player as a partner once and as an opponent twice. At the end of the tournament there is only one winner.

To those who enjoy squeeze plays and can recognize them in actual competition, the following hand proved a real thrill in the recent Ohio State Individual Contract Tournament.

The Bidding

Mr. Frank H. Grace of Cleveland, sitting in the South, opened the bidding with one heart. This was very gratifying to West, who passed. North, feeling that his diamond suit was a little too weak to bid on the first round, responded with two clubs.

Mr. Grace made a slam try bid on three no trump. North bid four diamonds and Mr. Grace lost no time in getting into six no trump.

The Play

The queen of spades was opened by West, South winning with the ace and leading a club, which was won in dummy with the queen.

A small diamond was played and the queen finessed. When it held, the ace was played, followed by the deuce, West discarding a heart and East winning the trick with the king.

East returned the eight of spades,
West played the ten, forcing North to win with the king. Dummy's two good diamonds were cashed, East discarding two clubs, declarer discarding two spades. The ace of clubs was then cashed, West discarding a heart.

The declarer was down to the ace, king and nine of hearts and a small spade. West held the jack of spades and three hearts to the queen. The king of clubs was led from dummy, declarer discarding the four of spades, and West was squeezed. If he dropped the jack of spades, dummy's nine would be good, while if he discarded a heart, the declarer won the last three tricks in his own hand with the ace, king and nine of hearts.

CONTRACT CASE

JUDGMENT GIVEN FOR PLAINTIFFS

Notice of appeal was immediately given when the Chief Justice, Mr. J. R. Wood, yesterday gave his deferred judgment for plaintiffs in an action in which Keller, Kern, and Company, Ltd., of 10-17, Connaught Road Central, were sued for $1,800.

Plaintiffs were the Kwong Yuen firm, of 217, Queen's Road Central, and their claim was in connection with the non-delivery of 54 pieces of blue serge valued at $2.50 per yard.

Mr. H. C. Lim, instructed by Mr. P. H. Sin, represented plaintiffs, and Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jr., instructed by Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, appeared for the defendants.

The Judgment.

The case was heard on Monday, when his Lordship reserved judgment. Yesterday he said:

This is an action by buyers under a contract for the sale of goods. They sue for damages for non-delivery.

For protection against the claim the sellers rely upon a term in the contract which is as follows: Clause 10—If any claim is made sellers reserve the right to take over the cargo for their own account and no compensation can be claimed by buyers. I will assume that the sellers have here purported to act under this clause.

The question remains whether in the circumstances here arising, they can by taking this step escape liability in damages for non-delivery.

In my view, the above clause only operates when goods have been delivered to and retained by the buyer. If then the buyer should not be content with his bargain and should make a claim against the seller, the seller may under this clause elect to re-take the goods and to cancel the contract. The word 'to take over the cargo for their own account' must imply that the sellers have lost possession of the goods sold and propose to regain it.

No Delivery.

In the present case there has been no delivery. It has been assumed in argument that the sellers tendered goods under the contract which the buyers rejected. But even that is not so. It appears clearly from the correspondence that these goods were never tendered in fulfillment of the contract. They were offered in lieu of fulfillment. At the outset of these negotiations, the defendants, frankly and honestly admitted the mistake which had been made.

The interpretation of Clause 10 which I here adopt seems to me to be evident on its own language, but I would add that it would require very explicit terms to embody the meaning for which the defendants have here contended. If the clause is to avail them here such a construction would amount to this, viz, that in any circumstances whatsoever the sellers could, on a claim by the buyers arising, escape liabilities for non-fulfillment of their contract by a mere declaration that it was their intention to retain the goods. The clause in my opinion does not say this and does not mean this.

Furthermore my construction is supported by the Chinese version in the contract of Clause 10 which appears to speak of "we take in the goods."

A submission has been made for the defendants that damages to be awarded, if any, should be merely nominal. This submission is based upon precedence where goods sold have been delivered under a contract and have been returned to the seller, but in the present case there has been no delivery.

In my view this claim succeeds. I therefore enter judgment for the plaintiffs for the damages claimed with costs.

An Appeal.

Mr. D'Almada asked for a stay of execution of judgment pending an appeal.

His Lordship said judgment would be stayed for 21 days. The damages would be paid into court in accordance with Mr. Lim's application.

LONDON JOYFUL

CROWD GREETED TWO EX-PRISONERS

London, July 5.

Amid scenes of tremendous enthusiasm, Thornton and MacDonald, the two British engineers recently released from a Soviet prison, stepped out of the train in Liverpool Street to-day. A huge crowd greeted them.

Among those who met them officially were the Chairman and other officers of Metropolitan-Vickers, Ltd., for which firm they were working in Russia when they were charged with sabotage and espionage.

Friends and relatives, too, were there. Smiling happily and waving to old acquaintances, Thornton and MacDonald pressed through the throng.

It was over the altercation which followed the trial of these engineers, and their comrades, that Great Britain raised an embargo against Russian goods, which was lifted with the release of Thornton and MacDonald.—Reuter.

HOPE FOR COVERAGE BY MINISTRY

Nanking, July 5.

AIRMAN KILLED IN MOTOR SMASH

Promised Bride Never to Fly Again
Paris, July 6. The well-known French airman, Robida, hero of the Paris-Hanoi flight with Codos last year, has been killed in a motor-car smash. He was only recently married and he promised his bride that he would never fly again.—Reuter.

THE HENLEY REGATTA

DIAMOND SCULLS SURPRISE
BANK OARSMAN'S SUCCESS
London, July 5. The Henley Royal Regatta opened to-day in glorious sunshine and otherwise ideal conditions, the river being at its normal level and its average stream.

The absence of wind also added to the interest of the racing, eliminating any chopiness of the water. There was an early surprise in the Diamond Sculls when Guye, the amateur champion, and the holder of the Wingfield Sculls, was comfortably beaten in the first heat by Cole of Barclay's Bank. Cole rowed splendidly throughout and never gave Guye a chance of catching him. He was making his first appearance at Henley.

AMERICAN FORTUNES.
The foreign challenge is stronger than ever this year though they commenced the programme in the Diamond Sculls by eliminating one another. Two American entrants, Strang and Cutler, were beaten by Savro (Czechoslovakia) and Saurin (France) respectively, but a third American competitor, Rutherford, beat Thompson, of London, by a few feet.

In the Thames Cup, Quintin beat Princeton (America) comfortably, but Hun School (America) beat First Trinity, Cambridge, in a very exciting race in which first one crew and then the other snatched a narrow lead.—Reuter.

RUBBER OUTPUT RESTRICTIONS

OUTLOOK REPORTED FAVOURABLE
The Amsterdam correspondent of the Financial Times declares that authoritative rubber circles in Holland state that restriction negotiations are proceeding favourably. The recent visit of two Dutch members of the International Working Committee to London is stated to have yielded good results and it is understood that an official statement will be issued shortly.—Reuter.

NEW ROOSEVELT STATEMENT

FAILS TO SATISFY THE GOLD BLOC
MIDNIGHT MEETING
LONDON, JULY 6. NOTHING CAN NOW SAVE THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE, IN THE OPINION OF THOSE CLOSEST TO THE STAGE WHERE THE FINAL DRAMA IS BEING ENACTED.

At a meeting of the gold countries held at midnight, following the receipt of a message from President Roosevelt, a resolution for the adjournment of the conference was unanimously adopted, virtually sealing its doom. The Roosevelt statement was regarded as conciliatory in tone, but as offering nothing to meet the views of the European gold bloc. It is, therefore, felt to be useless waste of time to pursue the economic discussions.

STABILISATION A MINOR ISSUE!
The new Roosevelt statement was transmitted to the Secretary-General of the League, M. Avenol. It stresses that the President desires the World Economic Conference to continue and declares that he does not see how the minor issue of temporary stabilisation can in any way diminish the advisability of such discussions. He urges the Conference to seek to mitigate and remedy the evils of the present economic situation and he promises American co-operation.

CANNOT BE DIVERTED.
But, he declares, the revaluation of the dollar in terms of American commodities is an end from which the Government and the people of the United States cannot be diverted. The value of the dollar in terms of foreign countries cannot be the immediate concern of the United States. President Roosevelt urges that apart from stabilisation of currencies, there are other great problems deserving exploration.

COMMODITY PRICES.
The first task is to restore the commodity price levels, to the place at which industry and agriculture can function profitably and efficiently. This statement was duly considered at the meeting of the gold bloc countries, but failed to affect their verdict in favour of the adjournment of the Conference. Their decision makes it virtually certain that adjournment will be decided upon at to-day's meeting of the Bureau of the Conference.

NO DATE POSSIBLE.
As the resumption of the Conference must depend entirely upon America's readiness to consider stabilisation, no date can be fixed for the re-meeting of the Conference, which will be compelled to adjourn sine die. The decision was reached after a meeting at the French headquarters which lasted from 10.15 p.m. until 11.40 p.m. after which it was learned from French quarters that the gold bloc were of opinion that while President Roosevelt's new statement represents definite progress, it confirms the view that the difference between the United States and the European viewpoints on the monetary question makes it very difficult effectively to continue the Conference at present.

LOAN INTEREST ISSUE

PAYMENT IN GOLD DOLLARS OR AMERICAN DOLLARS?
London, July 6. In view of the action of the United States in going off the gold standard and debasing the dollar, the gold bloc countries are waiting for a very considerable interest to discover what method of payment will be adopted on the Chinese loan.

EZRA BROTHERS GUILTY

BIG DOPE RING CONFESSION
POSTPONEMENT OF SENTENCE
San Francisco, July 5. Judah Ezra, formerly a millionaire resident of Shanghai, and his twin brother, Isaac Ezra, pleaded guilty to violation of the Narcotic Laws when arraigned to-day. They were arrested following the discovery of a large consignment of drugs aboard the Japanese liner, Asama Maru. The drugs were concealed in oil drums. The American authorities are satisfied that by the capture of the Ezras they have broken into one of the biggest dope-running rings operating in the Far East and the United States.

SENTENCE POSTPONED.
Sentence upon them was postponed until September 2, pending the receipt of further information from the Orient regarding the smuggling ring of which the Ezras are alleged to be the heads. The Assistant Attorney said that the brothers had furnished the police with valuable information which would aid the Government to eradicate the ring's activities.

Judah Ezra admitted that he had amassed a considerable fortune as a result of the organisation's activities. Raw opium and the derivatives of opium had been imported into America in large quantities disguised as tea and other packed and canned products. "COMMERCIAL" FIRMS. Fake commercial firms were in existence, he admitted, for handling the consignments. Over $50,000 of drugs were found concealed in Ezra's home in San Francisco, where he had been apparently operating as a real estate agent. Three men and a woman indicted with the Ezras brothers also pleaded guilty and were remanded in gaol.—Reuter.

U.S. TO IMPROVE BATTLESHIPS

$70,000,000 WANTED FOR MODERNISATION
Washington, July 5. The Navy is to ask for $77,000,000 for the modernisation of battleships which will give the United States fleet battleships equal to those of any navy, stated Senator Swanson, Secretary for the Navy to-day. The money will come from public works, he explained. The modernisation of five battleships and increasing the elevation for two others, for attacking submarines, will be included.

DEMOCRACY GOES OUT

CENTRE PARTY DISSOLVED
GERMAN NAZIS' TRIUMPH
Berlin, July 6. Herr Bruening, the leader of the Catholic Centre Party, has announced that the party has dissolved itself. The decision follows the "invitation" extended to the Party by Herr Hitler.—Reuter.

Later. The dissolution marks the formal end of the Parliamentary system of government in Germany, although the announcement does not indicate that the members of the Centre Party have received any definite guarantees from Hitler in return for their disappearance. The party statement gives the members the possibility of joining the Chancellor's National Front and cooperating in the construction of the new order.

It expects that the confiscation of the party property and the arrests of the Centrists will cease, that those already arrested will be released, and adds the hope that the Centrists in future will be treated in the same way as the Nazis.

The Centre Party deputies will not go over to the Nazis en bloc, but each will decide for himself. It is understood that Herr Bruening and other leaders will lay down mandates.—Reuter.

PLOT AGAINST HITLER

LITVINOFF IN PARIS

NEW NON-AGGRESSION PACT MOVE
BY INVITATION
London, July 6. M. Litvinoff left London for Paris yesterday at the request, it is understood, of the French Government.

M. Litvinoff will meet M. Paul-Boncour, the Foreign Minister, and probably M. Daladier, the French Premier. It is believed that the invitation has some connexion with the definition of aggression contained in the Convention just signed by the Soviet Foreign Commissar with the representatives of eleven other countries.

The definition is not contained in the Franco-Soviet Pact of Non-Aggression and it is thought that France is contemplating its insertion.—Reuter.

SOVIET AND LITHUANIA SIGN AGREEMENT

London, July 5. A Convention on the lines of those concluded this week between the U.S.S.R. and various other countries has been signed at the Soviet Embassy in London to-day between the U.S.S.R. and Lithuania.

This is the tenth country whose borders touch the Soviet Union frontier to sign a non-aggression pact with the Soviet.—British Wireless.

WHEAT ACREAGE REDUCTION

AGREEMENT ON 15% CUT
London, July 5. Fifteen per cent. has been tentatively agreed as the rate of reduction of wheat acreage in connection with the agreement between Canada, Australia, the Argentine and United States.

This will depend on the crops exports to be based on those of the last three to five years and not on the production. The Australia, Argentine and United States delegates have been constituted into a committee to seek European co-operation regarding the scheme. A reply to this request is expected on July 10.

Separate understandings will be reached with the Soviet and Dumbanian representatives on the question of their co-operation.—Reuter.

BRITISH GOVT. AND THEIR RELEASE
London, July 5. In the House of Commons to-day Sir John Simon was asked whether any of the Russian employees of Metropolitan Vickers were still in prison, and if so, whether he would make representations with a view to a reduction of their sentences. Sir John Simon said the duty of the British Government in this matter was one which they endeavoured to discharge in relation to British subjects. Representations to a foreign government in regard to its own nationals stood on a different footing. The firm naturally hoped that the considerations which had led to the release of British employees who were British might operate in favour of other employees.—Reuter.

REBEL WARSHIPS AT ANCHOR

LYING AT MOUTH OF RIVER
NANKING SACKS ADMIRAL
We are informed by the naval authorities this morning that the three Chinese warships which were sighted off Waglan yesterday morning anchored at the mouth of the Canton river last evening.

The vessels are believed to be the Hai Chi, the Hai Shen and the Cheng Ho (formerly known as the Chao Ho), who deserted from Tsziao in the mutiny directed against Admiral Shen Hung-fieh of the North-Eastern Fleet, and concurrently Mayor of Tsziao.

A message from Nanking says that the authorities there decline to comment upon the arrival in the Canton district of the mutinous warships. The Ministry of the Navy has announced the appointment of Hsueh En-chieh, chief of staff to Shen Hung-fieh, as the latter's successor in command of the North-Eastern Fleet. It is fairly certain that the three warships are negotiating with the Canton authorities, and the feeling in Nanking is that some resentment will be caused if Canton accepts the offers of the mutineers.

MOSLEM GIRL AND CHRISTIANITY

USE OF COERCION DENIED BY GOVT.
London, July 5. Asked in the House of Commons what steps the Government were taking to inquire into allegations that a Moslem girl pupil at a missionary school at Port Said was beaten to force her to accept Christianity, Sir John Simon said he understood the girl was beaten by teachers as a punishment for rudeness and disobedience, and that there was no ground for the allegation made in certain quarters that this disciplinary action was an attempt to force the girl to accept Christianity.

The Acting High Commissioner had been in close touch with the authorities since the incident had occurred with a view to the establishment of some kind of central supervision over certain aspects of missionary activities in Egypt and the Inter-Mission Board were also being consulted.—British Wireless.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Hands Behind Head; Then
Bend Down—Down!

You may not accomplish this first day . . . but persevere.

BY JAC AUER

Slender waistlines and flat abdomens are the ideal of American women this spring. New Spring suits won't look right, unless you get your waistline in trim. This exercise pulls your waistline and better yet, eventually holds your waistline stretched by strengthening the muscles that do the trick.

Stand erect, feet apart, clasp your fingers behind your head and step forward with your left foot, holding your weight on the back one. Now pull your head forward, clear down to your knee on your extended left leg, if you can get it that far. You probably can't—the first day. But keep persevering. That is your aim. Straighten, stretch your head down toward your right knee.

Before you start stretching your head down, drop your head backwards onto your clasped hands. This stretches your abdomen first, then gives you more of a back stretch as you bend forward.

Try this exercise two times for each leg, the first day. Increase the count until you reach 10. It is one of the best waistline stretches ever used.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton.

I know of nothing more dangerous than the medical book in the hands of the laity.

By this I mean the type of book that describes symptoms, tells you what is wrong with you, and advises remedies.

These books are intended for doctors, not the common run of people.

Certainly there are books and books on health, written by doctors for the help of mothers that are not only excellent but almost necessary to have on hand. But these physicians know for whom they are writing and impart only the knowledge that is safe for the family to know.

Rash Grows "Alarming"

For instance, here is a case. A mother had one of these books that had belonged to her husband's father, a doctor some time deceased.

Her baby broke out in a rash one day. He wasn't sick, he just had a rash, and co-incidentally a little cold. Out came her thermometer—which was right—but it proved he had no fever. Then out came her doctor book—which was wrong—and she read pages and pages on rashes.

Now about a dozen diseases start with a rash and runny nose—also about a hundred varieties of skin disorders. Finally she thought she had the right place. The rash looked like tetter which she herself had had one time and for which her doctor had given her a whitish lotion that settled into a powder at the bottom of a big bottle while the top liquid looked like clear water.

A Poison Applied!

She did not know that powder was a deadly poison.

She shook it up, moistened bandages with it and tied up the little fellow's arms.

Now what had happened was that on a windy day he had been outside in a little short sleeved suit and his tender skin had chafed. That was all. It happened then that his cold got worse. She called up the doctor finally and he came to say that it was a cold and that was all. But what was this on his arms?

She explained and showed him the ancient bottle of tetter lotion. He knew what it was, poison, and then suggested that she give him the doctor book.

What! Her precious volume! Why that was how she discovered that she herself had hardening of the arteries, and high blood pressure.

Into the Furnace

The secret was out. He looked at her and shook his head. This was why she was such a nervous wreck. All these months this healthy young woman had been worrying herself to death over her condition.

At last he lost his temper and gave her a piece of his mind. "I'm not asking you for the book now, Madge, I'm taking it. It's too old to be of much use to anyone now so I will start the furnace with it."

WHAT'S TO BE GAINED BY TELLING ADOPTED CHILDREN THE TRUTH?

By Olive Roberts Barton

Should parents tell children that they are adopted?

It is one of the most difficult problems that arise to face the man and woman who have taken a baby to love and cherish as their own.

If you had opened your heart and home to a warm little bundle of humanity, had told yourself from the beginning that from now on for evermore you were the same to that baby and he to you as if the Lord had sent him direct to your arms, and each day thereafter had strengthened that love, would you, could you think calmly of the time when the child would come home any day, "Aren't you my really truly mama?"

Love Is Just the Same

We women with our own children have an idea that it is a different kind of love with which foster parents regard the adopted baby. Those who know any there is no difference. A woman said recently that she loved her dear niece's baby, that she had adopted, better than she loved her own.

This, however, is not the point. A foster parent is anxious—almost overly anxious—to do what is best for the child. And wonders whether or not it is best for the child to know the truth.

Why Need the Child be Told?

Also, if it is best, at what age he should be told. Is it better for his parents to tell him before the news comes from schoolmates, or to take a chance and wait until his judgment and reason will come to the rescue and soften the blow.

Again, is it necessary to tell him at all? Why need he ever know? Why cannot his parents reach old age secure in the love a son would give his real parents, even though he has married and has other interests in life? If he knew he were adopted this knowledge might affect his relationship more or less with them. In a busy man's life even blood parents often come in for just such time as he can give them.

This matter of telling the child I believe must be decided by the parents themselves. Advice in such a sacred and intimate matter I feel would be profane.

But some thoughts might help to decide which is best.

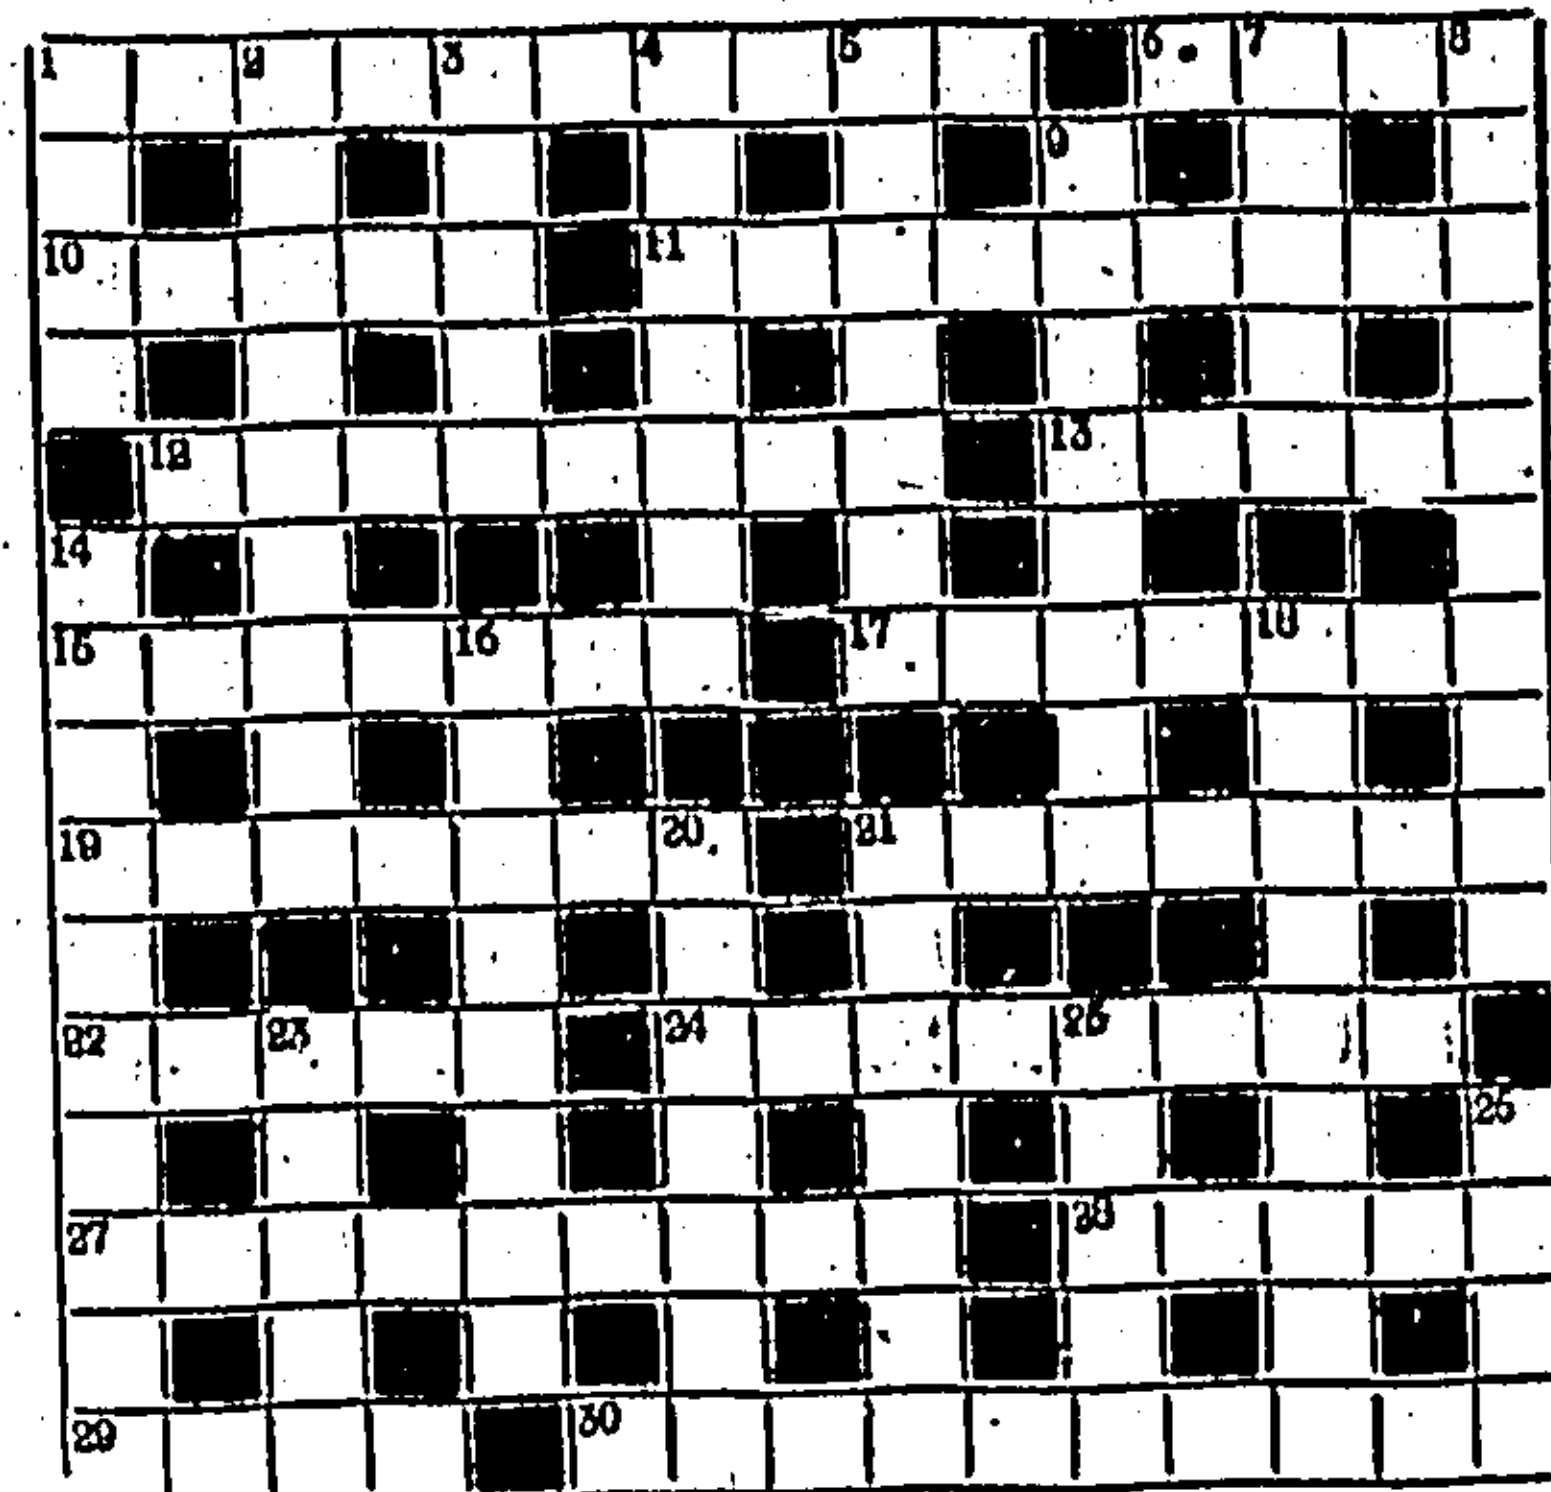

If it can be possibly arranged, a change of residence from the district where the adoption has taken place is helpful, because it obviates much of the danger of the news being told and spread by other families and reaching the child through the cruel chatter of other children.

Parents Alone Can Decide

A little child is happy in the thought that his parents are his own. There is no harm, rather the contrary, in keeping him in ignorance. Through childhood and adolescence the matter should rest with the parent. His judgment is the thing to guide him. But unless there is a vital reason for telling, and nothing is to be gained, why should he be told?

Later on, when he is fully mature, and has begun to make a world of his own, it may seem wisest for him to know. Not only many some question of law come up, but he is entitled, I think, to know the truth about himself.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONICA O'DAIR helps to support her mother, younger brother and sister by working in a drug store in the small town of Belvedere. Her older brother, BILL, plans to marry ANDIE GILLEN as soon as Andie divorces her husband. Monica is in love with DAN CARLIGAN whose wealthy parents do not approve of her. SANDRA LAWRENCE, pretending to be Monica's friend, tries to win Dan from her.

CHAPTER XXV

Sandra's voice, in spite of her desperate efforts to keep it cool, had a note of hysteria. "Where are you taking me now?" "You keep your mouth shut!" The woman in the heavy veil, the one who had joined her captor a moment before, spoke hoarsely. Sandra had a fleeting impression she had heard that voice before and that its owner was attempting to disguise it. She shrank from the glare of eyes behind the heavy strappy of gauze. There was something wildly intimidating about that stare.

They conferred for a few minutes outside the closed door while the girl on the couch, her feet still bound, allowed her eyes to rove frantically about the room, seeking some means of escape. There seemed to be none. The window was locked and barred—she could see that. Even if her shackles were loosed it would take some superb tactics to get out of this fetid room. Fool—fool she had been to come alone! They had got her into this trap with maddening ease.

Sandra's thoughts roved to home and her father. He would be reading that soiled note presently. If she knew him, he had already telephoned the police. Then what? Would his life also be in danger? Pretending to shrug off this notion as pure melodrama, Sandra raised her head proudly. The man re-entered and, stooping, loosened the ropes which bound her slender ankles together.

"Come along, you!" he said, not unkindly. "We're steppin' out of here." Sandra brushed against the woman in the passage as she followed. Again she had a sense of imminent menace, of an almost tangible hatred.

The man indicated she was to sit beside him in the rickety sedan.

Before stepping into it Sandra glanced about quickly to fix the scene in her mind. In the darkness she could see only a rotting fence and dooryard. The whole place was like half a hundred discouraged farms tended by renters in the countryside. There was nothing to distinguish it.

"Never mind your lookin'," the man chuckled. "We're not comin' this way again."

The veiled woman clambered into the back seat and Sandra felt these boring eyes upon her.

They rode, bumping and away-ling, for what seemed to the girl hours although when she glanced at the dial of her watch she saw it was only 11 o'clock. Curious they didn't trouble to blindfold her! She knew this road—it was the Embury Turnpike. Wouldn't it be the simplest thing, she thought, to scream—to attract the attention of some passing motorist? For all she knew alarms might have been broadcast already regarding her disappearance.

They turned left into a lane lined with poplars. The moon was rising and the landscape lay cool and sharply etched before them, like a back drop in a theatre. Black against the sky rose a clumsy house, sprouting half a dozen chimneys. Dark. Sinister.

"Wait here," the man commanded his henchman. He jumped out and went about to the back of the house, returning presently in disgruntled mood.

"Key's not here," he cried to the woman in the back seat. Sandra had an almost insane impulse to laugh. It was so absurd, this criminal protesting innocently that he couldn't get into a house because he hadn't a key.

The woman wrenched the car door open, evidencing her intention of searching for the missing key. But instead she paused, stilling a scream. Lights were blurring the roadbed of the lane. A car was coming toward them at top speed.

"It's the cops!" yelled the man. "Let's go." He flung himself into the driver's seat. The starter whirled—died. Again and again he tried it, desperation in every move. But the car bore down on them.

"Run for it!" said a hoarse voice. Sandra saw the veiled woman trip over a log. Then the lights of the car shone full into her eyes.

"You big—!" Sandra looked up, half laughing, half crying. But instead of the friendly blue-coated figure she had expected to see, she found herself staring into the eyes of James, the chauffeur.

"You all right?" His voice sounded relieved. The woman, having picked herself up, now began to run. In a trice, the long-legged James had overtaken her, was shaking her soundly.

"Little sap!" Sandra heard him saying. "Didn't I tell you?"

She could hear angry sobs, a protesting murmur. Hetty! It was Hetty who had been her captor, whose burning glance of hate had eaten into her very flesh.

Recovering her composure completely, Sandra swung herself over the side of the car.

James turned. The habit of respect was strong but even Sandra could catch the note of dislike.

Gradually he muttered, "You threw us out without jobs. You wouldn't give us even a recommendation. It wasn't our fault."

Sandra flushed. "She was impudent. She didn't deserve it."

James put a restraining hand on Hetty, whose finger forward boded no good to Sandra. The man, her original captor, had by this time disappeared, drifted into the darkness somewhere.

"You better not talk that way," James said defensively to Sandra. "You better be glad I come along in time to save you. When she" (he indicated the struggling Hetty) "gets a mad on she's a sure enough wildcat. She was bound to get even."

"I'm not goin' to let her off like this, so easy," panted Hetty. "She was sweet on you. She tried to get her hooks into you and when she couldn't, she gave us both the air."

James intervened. "You know as well as I do, Miss Lawrence, we can't get jobs without we have a recommendation."

"They didn't want that—they wanted money," Sandra informed him icily. "They've sent a note

The girl nodded, defiant. "You little nit-wit!" He whirled on her. "Do you know what a mess you can get us into? You and that no-count cousin of yours."

"I don't care," Hetty said sullenly. "I said I'd get her and I did. She's not as smart as she thinks she is. Anyhow we got to go through with it now. She knows who we are and she'll get the police after us if we let her go. Don't be such a chicken heart, Jim. She doesn't care what happens to us. Why should we care about her? She'd let us starve to death."

There was danger in the atmosphere. Brooding hatred. The smoke of revenge. Two pairs of eyes, stared at the girl in the Paris frock.

"What good is she anyway?" Hetty raved. "Never does a hand's turn. Makes mischief wherever she goes. What right's she got to live?"

Sandra saw something flash in the darkness. She heard a muffled report. She watched, fascinated, the struggling figures.

James turned his head sharply. "Get out of here," he barked. "Run for your life. And if you tell about this night—if you get Hetty into trouble—you'll be sorry for it, that's all."

Sandra ran, stumbling in the ruts, almost sobbing. Briers tore her thin stockings and once she fell into a pool of ooze, sinking to her ankles.

At last she reached the main road, a bedraggled figure. Which way to turn? She did not know, so took the right, hoping it led toward home. Her thin shoes were hopelessly inadequate. Her body felt as if it had been beaten.

Several cars passed, their lights almost blinding her. Her breath was torn from her now in gusty sobs, every one burning her parched throat. On and on she stumbled along this road that seemingly had no turning.

At last she heard the purr of a motor going in the same direction. She was frightened rather than relieved, hearing men's shouts. What new horrors did

PRODUCING NATIONS IN AGREEMENT

London, July 5. The four greatest wheat producing countries of the world, Canada, Australia, the Argentine and United States, have reached an agreement on grain problems, on the formula put forward by the American representatives at recent discussions.

The great purpose behind the wheat producers' move is to increase prices. Wheat which once sold for $51.60 per bushel, has been selling in recent years for one-third the amount. Even the famous hard wheats of Canada have failed to maintain a better yield.

It is understood that as a result of the newly reached agreement, the plan will be submitted to European wheat producers who have undertaken not to augment grain acreage or production. The consuming nations, it is understood, have promised to reduce tariffs against wheat when the price rises in consequence of production restriction.

Wheat prices have strengthened already, though they have probably been affected by adverse crop reports from the United States and elsewhere as much as by the hope of international sales control.

Canada, Australia, Argentine and the United States will exercise a double control; that is, they will govern exports and internal stocks with vigilance.

The agreement has not as yet been signed, but since Australia has signified assent it is understood that the pact lacks only formal approval to be effective.

The wheat plan to which the four countries have agreed at present does not specify any definite figures. These would be filled in if the European countries and consumers give assent to the proposals.—Reuter.

LUANTUNG ZONE

CONFLICTING NEWS FROM NORTH

Tokyo, July 5.
From Dairen it is learned that a Chinese-Japanese agreement, regarding details involved in the evacuation of the fighting zone, has been signed. The agreement refers, inter alia to the distribution of Chinese troops assigned to patrol duty and other work, and also to through traffic on the Peking-Mukden Railway accompanying the withdrawal of Japanese troops.

Earlier reports from Peking state that a hitch occurred in the Dairen Conference to settle the Luantung question, and as a result the Japanese are demanding various concessions. They ask, first that the Japanese authorities be permitted to station a certain number of military inspectors in the Luantung district after the Japanese withdrawal to the Great Wall and; second, a board consisting of Chinese, Japanese and Manchukuo representatives to be set up for joint control of the Luntai-Shanghai section of the Peking-Mukden Railway. The Chinese delegates have referred the demands to Peking, which have been telegraphed to Nanking for instructions. In the meantime, the Chinese delegates have been ordered to postpone their return to Peking. The train service between Peking and Tongshan was resumed to-day after a suspension of nearly two months.—Reuter.

RAILWAY LOAN.

Nanking, July 5.
The agreement for a loan for completion of the Canton-Hankow Railway has been approved, but the office of the Board of Trustees of Sino-British Boxer Funds hopes that the Ministry of Railways will make an application to the Executive Yuan for $5,000,000 from the recently concluded American loan of $850,000,000 to meet payment in case of default.

AID TO HUMANITY HAMBURG'S BIG CONTRIBUTION CURING TROPICAL DISEASES

Hamburg's proud claim to be regarded as the gateway that connects Germany with the rest of the world is justified for two reasons. In the first place, she is the most important seaport on the European Continent and her merchant community possesses extensive business relations with every country in the world. The outcome is that Hamburg is qualified to act as an extremely efficient intermediary in the interchange of commodities between Germany and the countries beyond the sea. In the second place, she has always been prominent in the domain of the intellect and is therefore able to communicate to other countries the results of Germany's achievements in arts and science. The work done by her in this respect is of great value to mankind as a whole and is on a part with her activities as a seaport and a commercial emporium. It is very significant—and, as it were, symbolical of this twofold function of the old Hanseatic city—that her University with its numerous affiliated institutes for the promotion of science has more and more come to the foreground during the past few years.

GREAT MEDICAL INSTITUTION.

The Institute for Marine and Tropical Diseases occupies a leading position among these institutions on account of its considerable effect upon the development of medicine in the tropical and sub-tropical countries of Central and South America, Africa, India and the Far East. It is, indeed, the best-equipped of its kind throughout the world. It is devoted to teaching, research and healing work. It was founded in 1900 by Professor Bernhard Nocht, then chief of the harbour medical service, who is also chairman of the Malaria Committee appointed by the League of Nations. For three decades he presided over the great institution founded by him, but a few years ago he handed his work over to his trusted colleague, Professor Fulleborn.

Throughout the whole time of its existence all the departments of the Institute have been in charge of eminent and highly-qualified experts who have placed their talents at the service of mankind. As regards these, mention should be made, apart from the two gentlemen already named, of Professor Muhlen and Professor G. Glemau. Every one of them enjoys a worldwide reputation. Professor Fulleborn and Professor Muhlen, more particularly, have again and again been invited by the governments and university authorities of foreign countries to give lectures and to undertake research work for them. A few weeks ago, for example, Professor Muhlen gave a large number of lectures on the work done by the Institute and on the results achieved to numerous audiences in British India, the Netherlands Indies and the Far Eastern countries.

TROPICAL DISEASES.

The work done by the Institute consists—as already indicated by its name—in the investigation of the conditions tending to produce tropical diseases and of the possibilities of curing them. Some of the means used for this purpose are: annual courses for students and medical practitioners from every part of the globe; the large hospital affiliated to the Institute; the comprehensive collection of teaching requisites; one of the best-stocked libraries in the world in so far as tropical medicine is concerned; an excellent museum; the publication of carefully edited medical periodicals, occasional brochures, and textbooks on medicine. Apart from the general department, the Institute has also a helminthological, a clinical, a chemical, a bacteriological, a protozoological, an entomological and a pathological-anatomical department.

And what is the outcome of all this scientific work? It is overwhelming in its completeness and thoroughly justifies us in saying that the Hamburg Institute for Marine and Tropical Diseases is a valuable aid to suffering mankind. It is solely due to the efforts associated with its labours that malaria can now be actually cured by plasmoquine, whilst it was formerly only possible to give some relief to patients suffering from it, by administering quinine. Other important remedies discovered and tested by the Institute are yatrope and germanine, the one being used for amoebic dysentery and the other for sleeping sickness. In addition, numerous drugs have been examined by the Institute with a view to ascertaining their effectiveness in leprosy and other infectious diseases.

PIONEER WORK.

The Hamburg Institute for Marine and Tropical Diseases is associated with every important faculty of which they have attained.

TOULON BOMBARDED BUT MERELY IN IMAGINATION CONVOY BATTLE

Toulon. The bombardment of Toulon, the destruction of a wireless station and an attack on a convoy on its way from France to Africa have been the salient, if necessarily imaginary, features of the French naval manoeuvres in the Mediterranean.

"The Battle of the Convoys" in the open sea south of this base was the climax of these operations. A Cruiser squadron led by the Colbert—nicknamed "The Harle of the Seas"—was ordered out of Ajaccio (Corsica) to attack and turn a convoy going from Toulon to Bizerta (Tunisi), a distance of 300 miles. The Colbert's cruiser squadron was accompanied by five destroyers; the convoy was powerfully protected by three cruisers and seven destroyers.

BATTLE STARTS. At ten o'clock at night the intercepting squadron got under way and steamed due west with all lights doused in true pirate fashion. The route of the convoy, which was going due south, lay about 100 miles to the west of Corsica. The Colbert continued to lead her squadron through the darkness till dawn. At 7.30 a.m. visibility became clear enough to get a distinct view of the horizon. Against the skyline showed a little feather of black smoke.

The "Harle of the Seas" surged forward and her cascading bow-waves rose steadily.

Warned by her scouting aircraft, the convoy steamed off at full speed, but the attackers succeeded in closing the range and forcing the convoy to run back for Toulon. One lesson drawn from these manoeuvres appears to have been that a minimum of wireless transmission should be used, as it enables the enemy to locate positions with embarrassing accuracy.

EUROPE'S BEST POLICE DOG TURNS OUT TO BE A WOLF

Belgrade. The best police dog in Europe, which has already won over 200 prizes, is not a dog at all. It is a wolf, which was caught as a cub in the Bosnian woods six years ago.

Last year in Germany it won the first prize in an International Police Dog Show, not making a single mistake in all the tests for skill, training and accuracy.

The wolf is in constant demand to clear up mysteries for the Austrian police and is taken to all parts of the country to track down criminals. It is shown as a model in training schools for police dogs.

The wolf was captured by a police clerk from Vienna when he was out hunting. He took it back to Vienna and brought it up with his own police dogs. —Reuter.

medicine throughout the world for the purpose of exchanging mutual experience. Thousands of celebrated physicians in responsible positions everywhere have received their training on the Institute premises. The number of its enthusiastic admirers throughout the world is always growing; and these have founded an association called "The Association of the Friends of the Hamburg Tropical Institute," whose aim it is to promote the valuable work achieved by the Institute. Thus, it is evident that the latter has done pioneer work towards the growth of international peace and good will in the intellectual domain, whilst it is also an exponent of Germany's scientific

FATAL BALCONY COLLAPSE — LOWERING OF STEEL BARS — MORE THAN A COINCIDENCE

At the resumed inquiry into the Central Magistracy yesterday into the fatal balcony collapse at No. 15 Yuk San Street, Wongsheichong, a witness was of the opinion that the collapse was due to the lowering of a wrong position of the steel reinforcing frame for the floor of the structure. He suggested that the owner in ignorance may have made this alteration without the knowledge of the architect.

It was disclosed that twenty-eight other balconies in that district are in similar condition.

Mr. Schofield is sitting as Coroner, and the special jury empanelled comprises Messrs. R. A. Rodgers (foreman), Colbourne Little and Li Koon-chun.

Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K. C. (instructed by Mr. F. E. Nash, of Messrs. Woo and Nash, appeared for the contractors, Messrs. Wang Tak and Co., Mr. H. J. Armstrong of Messrs. Deacons, for the architect, Mr. A. J. Lane, and Mr. M. K. Lo, of Messrs. Lo and Lo, for Mr. Kwok Wai-sam, the owner of the house.

Mr. Tong Kwong-hing draftsman in the employ of the architect, was called to continue his evidence.

Mr. Armstrong: On what terms are you employed by Mr. Lane?

My duties are to—I don't want to know what your duties are. I want to know on what terms you are employed. I mean your remunerations?—I work on a commission basis.

When you were first introduced to the owner, was he anxious to build property in another locality?

—Yes.

Where was the land he wanted to buy?—Shan Kwong Road, Wongsheichong.

Is that the property which Mr. Gockchin eventually bought?—No.

Mr. Gockchin also failed to buy this land.

Well, Mr. Gockchin eventually built a house in this neighbourhood?—No.

In connexion with No. 15 Yuk San Street, what were your duties actually when the house was being built?—I had to look after and inspect everything.

And you any duties in connexion with the steel bars?—I had to pay particular attention to the bars.

What had you to do exactly?—I had to see that the bars were secured in position in accordance with the plans.

What else?—I had also to see that they were of the proper size.

And of the proper quality?—Yes.

And was it part of your duties to take measurements with a foot-rule to see that they were of the right distance apart?—Yes.

Important Operation.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jenkin, witness agreed that the pouring of concrete was a very important operation in the building of a house.

Mr. Jenkin: And you were sent from the office as special representative to oversee that?—No.

Was a representative from the office sent?—No.

Did nobody from your office oversee the pouring of the concrete?—No.

In answer to further questions, witness said that when the concrete was first laid, he did go down to the site and waited for about 20 minutes. He then found that everything was satisfactory.

Mr. Jenkin: Is a man called Chan in your office?—Yes.

He was present at these operations all the time?—No.

Did he go down there at all?—Yes, he had to water the concrete as soon as it was laid. He had instructions to do that.

He was detailed specially to look after concrete?—His duties were to water the concrete as soon as it was laid.

His duties included supervising the concrete as it was poured in?—No.

The pouring in of the concrete in the balcony area was of prime importance, wasn't it?—Concrete in every part of the building is of importance.

Come, come. It is obvious that the pouring in of the concrete in the balcony area is more important than any other area?—Yes.

No Supervision.

Are you suggesting that nobody from the office came to supervise the pouring in of the concrete?—Neither Mr. Lane, yourself or Mr. Chan?—No.

Neither the three persons I have mentioned nor anybody else?—No.

On my first visit I found that the owner had a pair of foremen watching the operations, and I found everything satisfactory on that occasion.

And you left it at that?—I was satisfied with the way the concrete was laid, and with the quality of the material used.

During his experience of building he had been responsible for the completion of many houses in so far as overseeing was concerned.

Was the building of these houses in Yuk San Street just like the building in other places? I mean did you follow the usual practice?—Yes.

There was nothing abnormal or unusual in Mr. Kwok's houses?—Yes, there were several unusual aspects.

I don't mean to ask you about the features of the house itself. What I mean is was there any unusual relation between the architect, the owner and the contractor?—After I had made the plans, I handed them over to the owner and he himself chose the contractor.

No Notice Taken.

Anything else?—And I have never seen the owner's foreman taking any notice of the architect. You gave him the plans, you gave him the conditions, so there was no difference who chose the contractor, was there?—No.

Do you agree with me that in a contract signed by the architect, the contractor and the owner, the architect is in complete control over the building?—Yes.

Do you agree that the plans and specifications form part of the agreement?—Yes.

Under an agreement, do you agree that it is the duty of the contractor to build according to your plans?—Yes.

Do you agree that without your authority and consent, the contractor cannot deviate from the plans no matter what interferences he receives from outside?—I won't know if any deviations are made unless they tell me.

Yes, yes. But I am talking of a contractor's duties generally. Do you agree with me on this point?—Yes.

Is it usual or is it not usual for a Chinese owner to have his own foreman?—Yes. It is usual to have one.

Is the object of having an overseer to see the quality of the materials to see that he is not being swindled?—There are other objects. He must also see that the work is carried out satisfactorily. The foreman employed must be a competent man and must have some knowledge of building.

Responsibility.

And if the owner employs a foreman who is not competent (he is defeating his own object) does that relieve yours or the contractor's responsibility at all?—It does not lessen it.

I put it to you that you were paid five per cent. on the contractors' price and that this five per cent. includes your fee for superintending the erection of these houses?

Witness replied that it was a remuneration for drawing the plans and for previous work in connexion with land. It was also for supervision of work.

Shown two bills for a total of $7,100 witness acknowledged them, and said the sum represented five per cent. for supervision.

To your knowledge, Mr. Tong, how many times did Mr. Lane go to the site?—Forty or fifty times.

Referring to the cantilever balcony method, witness agreed that the cement concrete must never be subjected to tension. The mass must be confined to the lower edge.

Cause of Collapse.

Witness further agreed that the steel bars were always at the top of the balcony floor. If at the bottom, the balcony was rendered absolutely unsafe.

In reply to other questions, witness stated that he had seen the bars when they were supported by 4 1/2 in. wooden chocks. The fact that they were afterwards found to be only half an inch above the bottom suggested that the chocks were removed and the bars lowered to a position which rendered the structure unsafe and caused the collapse.

He suggested that the owner and his folks who usually visited the works after 5 p.m. had made the alteration in the belief that the bars were in the wrong position.

Mr. Lo: And this very interesting theory of yours, when did you form it? Did you tell the Police about it?

Witness replied that he did not, as it was only a recent theory over which he was still puzzling.

He had inspected adjacent balconies opened up since the mishap, and agreed that in all these other cases the bars had been similarly lowered. He agreed that the uniformity of this arrangement precluded an accident there.

Mr. Lo commented that 28 similar "accidents" would have to be explained, as there were that number of balconies in which the bars had been lowered.

After having explained the depth ordinarily allowed for the concrete bottom, Mr. Lo put it to witness that if the contractor had done their work properly they would in any case have seen to the concrete being poured in to a thickness of at least four inches below the steel rod frame.

Witness agreed.

You can use all the fancy graphs you've got into the bargain. "I know you can mention a lot of objections, but it can be done."

"Beg Pardon"—Speak up a bit, lad!

"I have got one or two good ways for dealing with that."

"What is wrong with this—Allow all the very rich chaps, a good amount of wealth—all that they can usefully do with but none for gambling on industry. Then, every one of them with more than this amount, if they are not prepared to spend the surplus put 'em on Country's Greedy List."

Then read this List over on the Wireless every night.

If they are so hard faced that they can stand that and all the talk there will be about 'em—'tis a brick round their neck and down 'em, they are no good."

"I do not propose hurting anybody or doing anybody any wrong, but we can't let any chap that lives in our world play a selfish game of 'Dog in the Manger'."

"And another thing! We can't allow these international financier chaps to upset all the world when they start scrapping amongst themselves trying to pinch each other's bit of power. Kicking up a dust and causing a regular hullabaloo."

"I know these fights—I've been in 'em."

"Do as you have a mind, when they start you can't keep out."

"They sort get you by the scruff of the neck, and say—'Come in lad'."

"It's going to be a right good rough and tumble—free for all."

But I've always noticed that when the battle's over and everything has subsided and peace and quietness reigns again, that in addition to having been in the fight, I've been well plucked in the bargain.

"Nearly always after one of those does the Bank comes and puts another Monkey on our Mill."

They stew in their own juice.

They have something to lose, they think. But what they do not realise is that they have more to gain than they have to lose.

The method of Joe Thorpe is probably right—ridiculous—who wants to listen to Economics—who wants to talk Economics—who wants to read Economics—probably known as the most depressing subject a student can possibly face—who wants to write economics?

The Crisis we are facing to-day is worse than we faced in 1914, except there are no Guns—yet.

(Mr. Cope's articles on the World Crisis, embodying his Spending Money thesis will shortly be published in pamphlet form.)

"A PURE UNDILUTED JOY—"

"The Vauxhall Cadet is a powerful, roomy and comfortable car and it possesses a silent second, must appeal alike to expert and novice. The other, the Synchro-Mesh gear changing is to novices, like myself, a pure undiluted joy."

So writes this Synchro-Mesh enthusiast. Try it for yourself—you cannot make a bad "change"! Smooth acceleration, decisive braking, steering that is effortless and ample power—all these you will find in the Vauxhall Cadet.

You will use less petrol than you'd expect. Modern lines, riding comfort, luxurious coachwork, tasteful colour schemes, headlights and radiator fitted in gleaming chromium, mark the Cadet as being a distinctly different car.

LOCAL AIR MAIL SERVICE HITCH

The suggestion that official objections by the Hongkong Government may interfere with the commencement of an air mail line between the Colony and Shanghai will provoke considerable discussion. Here is a service, equipped with four of the latest amphibian machines, ready to commence operations at a moment's notice—as early as Saturday. It would bring Hongkong within nine or ten hours' journey of Shanghai and would provide facilities of inestimable value to the Colony. In an interview with the Telegraph yesterday, Mr. H. M. Bixby, who is organising the new service, spoke as though there were no obstacles to be overcome and outlined the highly attractive features of the project. Enquiries in official quarters, however, revealed that no authority has been given for the landing of machines in regular service in Hongkong and that permission would be subject to negotiations now proceeding. It would be easy to dismiss objections as another indication of the lengths to which red tape can be made to stretch, but in actual fact, there are cogent reasons for the Government's attitude. It is well known that China has been peculiarly insistent upon territorial rights as far as they concern air travel and that no foreign airman is permitted to land in any part of China without having first gone to considerable trouble in obtaining permission from Nanking. The Hongkong Government, we understand, is perfectly prepared to allow the use of Kai Tak as a base for machines engaged in regular air-mail and passenger service in China provided the Chinese Government is prepared to enter into a reciprocal agreement, under which the Imperial Airways, for instance, would be permitted to land on Chinese territory when they extend their service to the Far East. Nevertheless, it seems unfortunate from every angle that Hongkong should reject the first really valuable service offered to it, a point of principle which may be speedily met, delaying the facilities, it may turn out, unnecessarily. A reasonable way out which suggests itself is the granting of provisional permission to land here, extension being contingent upon the conclusion of the reciprocal agreement now being sought.

NOTES OF THE DAY

The outbreak of malaria at Shing Mun was, perhaps, to have been expected. The very nature of the countryside, beautiful as it is, a warning and an indication that malaria cannot be entirely eradicated, although the vigorous measures now being taken to combat the trouble may furnish effective mitigation. The most interesting fact disclosed, however, concerns the high incidence of the disease among the labourers from Shanghai. Experience in the Colony over a long period has revealed that Northerners are highly susceptible to maladies of the malaria type when their Cantonese cousins remain practically immune. The moral would appear to be that when labour is engaged for the work on the Gorge Dam, close attention should be paid to the origin of the workmen.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN

It is fortunate for the peace of the Far East that the mood of Moscow differs vastly from that which seemingly has governed the actions of the Tokyo Government in the last twenty months. Incident after incident involving disputes between Japan and Russia have occurred recently and a militaristic spirit in Moscow must have provoked conflict long ere this. We do not suggest that Japan has been in any way wilfully provocative in her relations with Russia. But it is very obvious that if Russia had sought a cassus belli in this year of grace, she would not have had long to wait.

A RIGHT PERSPECTIVE

After the stream of complaints in Britain, particularly among the Conservative backbenchers, about the "abnormally low wages and bad conditions in Japan" permitting her success in trade competition with Britain, it has been left to Major Attlee, the Labour M.P. to give the House of Commons another side of the picture and a truer perspective of the position. As he points out, the Japanese cotton industry is an extremely efficient organisation. Lancashire must not sit back in despair but must put her own house in order. In the stress of the world's industrial, economic and social problems of to-day, there is too much readiness to attach the blame to one's neighbour instead of making a constructive effort to discover one's own shortcomings. The general attitude suggests that the world is afraid to face up to realities, or to risk experiments with a new cure for a malady which has refused to yield to the treatment by the old medicines. A new outlook is needed.

ABOUT WHISKEY

British and German distillers, not to mention members of the legal profession, are experiencing severe heartburn over whiskey. The point in dispute is whether the German distillers have any legal, moral, national, hereditary or commercial right to use the word whiskey? And a delightful academic argument is likely to be provided. In the meantime there seems to be no injunction against the continued use of the beverage, and readers who may have been alarmed by the possible results of such a controversy, can relax and regard the issue in a finely detached manner. Whiskey will probably taste and cost the same whether you ask for it in German or Scotch.

A PROFITABLE PURGE

There is something sneakily attractive about the plan for a "national ill-will week" put forward by a group of intellectuals in Paris. Under this scheme all Frenchmen would set aside one week in each year "to purge themselves of their latent evil and go in for a fine week of pure malevolence, calumny, hate, envy and sin." Towns, cities and provinces could designate the most villainous citizens under their jurisdictions and hold them up to public execration. Such a scheme, like a heavy thunder-storm, ought at least to clear the air a little. The great amount of rant and bad feeling that is automatically generated in the course of the daily routine might get a chance to discharge itself. After such a period it might be a little easier to practice the ideals which we are forever giving lip service to.

WORLD CRISIS

BLUNT WORDS BY A BLUNT MAN
BY FREDERICK COPE, A.M.I.E.E.

If we are to place any value on the results of logical or mathematical conclusions, we are compelled to accept the fact that there are financial aspects of the economic system, as we know it to-day, which are to be definitely discarded from the realm of practicability. Try as we may, they cannot be made to work in any permanency.

If we could retain the present system, it might be worth an attempt. Many of us, no doubt, have enjoyed phases of the system and are reluctant to part with them. The system is basically wrong but human nature in practice indulges in a little wrong.

Every indication supports the idea that a large percentage of people have decided that life is excited and made interesting by the streaks of gambling which run through it. This is near the truth, however much we may desire not to acknowledge it. But if we are good gamblers, we shall switch gambling operations from commerce and industry and turn them on to something else. Industry is going to be a bad thing for speculation. The more we win to-day, the worse we shall be "cleared out" in the near future.

With these people, we have no concern, as one of the objects of these Articles is to unravel, in order to find the real truth of things, and lay bare that which has its foundation in hypocrisy or any other uncontrolled human vice.

One wonders what will be the verdict of future generations when this period is under review. Intelligence they are bound to perceive. But when it is recorded that we suffered all the pangs and miseries of scarcity in times of abundance, they will also be compelled to accord us with a fair measure of imbecility.

The existing economic position can be viewed from almost an unlimited number of angles. If we look at the face of a clock from different angles, the appearance and even the time will seem to change, but the face of a clock does not actually alter. It is only the angle from which it is viewed that is different.

We will venture another illustration, on the lines of that given at the "Tenth Economic Conference," but from an altered angle of vision. The principles upon which this will be built, are the same as those from which previous conclusions have been drawn. They must be! They are basic and simple. Their virtues have been known throughout the ages, as also have the vices of the present system, which we have pretended not to see.

For this altered view, let us become acquainted with a special delegate at "the last of all Economic Conferences." An Industrialist, a Factory Owner—the product of five or six generations of hard work, making a living by producing things, by doing things, by giving service, and not by mere juggling with money.

The view might be humorous, but none the less, illustrative.

He is a man who sadly sees the results of the accumulated hard work of his forefathers and their workpeople and all that that means—a heartbreaking goodbye to old workpeople, and farewell to old servants. Everything that means life to him is slipping away.

In addition he sees scouring into Bolshevists, the loyal village stock that have centred round his grandfather's life, his own life and the factory's. A stock from which in past days has been bred some of the finest statesmen, sailors and soldiers the country has known.

All this pitiful and regrettable picture is the outcome, he knows, of a rotten financial system.

He is a type of man who is sturdy, honest, straightforward and human to a degree. He is simple in manner, and devoid of finesse. In feeling he has a peculiar vacillation of pathos, humour and seriousness.

He is addressing the delegates in his direct and incisive speech.

One moment he has the Conference roaring with laughter.

The next he paints such pathetic pictures that the delegates are nearly in tears.

He then bluntly flashes out some stark, unvarnished home-truth, and at times irritates the delegates almost to the limit of their endurance.

We see delegates jumping up protesting at this uncouthness. They are not accustomed to raw truths, and Mr. Joe Thorpe does not know the first thing about diplomatic decorum.

He is holding up their false ideals to ridicule. He is shaming them!

So exasperated do some of the delegates become, that one eventually jumps up and persistently protests and objects to the continuance of the speech. He fluently indicates the irrelevances, and especially the irrelevances, of the speech. He emphasizes the most important fact of all, the wasting of valuable time.

The last remark touches Mr. Joe Thorpe's ire.

"Wasting time"—he shouts.

"I can stand being accused of irrelevances and digressions, but—wasting time—that puts the 'tin hat' on it, because I've come to tell you, in about two minutes, what you've been trying to see for yourself for years, and you'll never see it, in your way, in the next ten years."

"I want no fancy words like 'remonstration'—and such like words—I'll tell you the cause—listen—there is nothing technical about it either—it is just a simple fault—it is—Greed."

"Now I've told you, I shall have to correct myself a bit."

"We can hardly say the cause is Greed because we are all Greedy. To be exact, it isn't Greediness."

"It is—over-greediness."

"Your Government runs you, but who runs your Government?"

"I'll tell you—these chaps who are 'Overgreedy.'"

"How—am—I going—to—alter things?"

"That's easy. My idea is this—"

"When there is no Spending, there is no Trade. All you've got to do, is to get that idea fixed firmly in your head."

"Those people that are mean and won't spend, you've got to make 'em spend."

"I should make everybody spend, and pay by cheque. Then if their account at the Bank at the end of every month didn't show a certain turnover, I should take their money from them, because they don't know how to use it."

"If they spend; they can earn. If nobody spends; nobody can earn."

"And you can work it out as you like, you can't get past that, and

The Very Idea!

INFLUENZA

By Eddie "Aspro" Kelly.

ALL joking aside, we are a sick man. Yesterday, we got the flu. So anything we may say to-day should be taken with a grain of salt or five grains of aspirin.

Doctors tell us that we should starve a fever and feed a cold, if you know what we mean. In fact, they say that we are exactly what we eat.

In that case, we were a bad egg this morning.

We were speaking to the doctor about it only last night.

"What's the best cure for a cold, Duck?" we asked.

Editor's note: Mr. Kelly doubtless meant to write "Doc."

Eddie's note: Mr. Kelly doubtless meant to type "Duck". Our doctor is a quack.

Anyway, the doctor put one of those old-fashioned phonograph tubes to our chest and made us say "99". Then he prescribed a course of treatment and confined us to bed. Which was just too bed.

Not that doctors aren't useful sometimes. We remember just before we were married visiting our old family doctor and asking him for some advice.

"Doctor," we said, "we are thinking of getting married."

"I wish I had," he replied.

"What, get married?" We asked.

"No," he said, "just thought about it."

Germs is what does it. Oh, yes it is. It's those little wriggly things that make a man blow and snort and cough and sneeze.

When germs come in at the door, in-flew-enza. Cravings of pardon, but we thought that one too sneezy to leave out.

Which reminds us that it's time for our medicine. Pete just telephoned us to let us know it was prepared.

"When," he asked, "is mon homme coming avec les snifters?"

We always pride ourself on our French, and nobody was going to get away with that.

"Bon ami," we replied, "Honi soit qui mal y pense!"

"Not a drop left in the place," he said.

"Mars donc!"

So it will have to be rum and lemon, after all.

WE ARE MISUNDERSTOOD.

Life is very hard for a reputed and/or alleged humourist sometimes. Here's dear old lady writing to us, appealing to our compassion for our wives and kiddy as a result of our little remark about whether we should pay the rent or the wine-merchant.

And we thought we were reforming. We hadn't let the landlord enter into consideration before!

MISSED OPPORTUNITIES.

These bus companies should come along to see us if they want to learn their business. There's a mint of money to be made out of it, especially on the Hongkong side. Imagine the trade if a hire car service was established at the Peak Tram station and another at the corner of Kennedy Road. We'd simply take our buses up to these points, let 'em break down in the normal way and hey presto, our hire cars would be chock-a-block. We have plenty of ideas like this one. We're ready to give them just for the asking.

TUT, TUT, TOO BAD.

Did you see the other day, someone broke into the Soviet Trade Commissioner's Office in Tokyo and wrecked the place, just to prepare the way for another gentleman who had ambitions to assassinate the official in charge.

This is very wrong. It seems to suggest that the man concerned could not have been educated in a very good school.

How much better is the Hongkong way when indignation is rampant, he is roused and temper flared. A roar gradually subsiding into the little babbling, like that of the bitch in the street.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN ON GERMANY

AIR POLICE BOMBING

BRITISH POLICY CRITICISED

DEBATE IN THE COMMONS

London, July 5.

During to-day's Commons discussion on Foreign Office vote, Sir Austen Chamberlain strongly urged the Government to reconsider their policy in regard to air bombing for police purposes in outlying areas.

He agreed that in certain areas, and under certain conditions, the aeroplane as a fighting weapon was the most humane instrument that could be employed because of the speed with which it enabled the spread of trouble to be prevented.

But the question arose now in relation to general disarmament and despite the extent of Britain's obligations in maintaining peace on the borders of civilisation, he did not see how she could ask other nations to agree to exempt her from the rules applying to them.

GERMAN SPIRIT

Sir Austen in another passage in his speech vigorously criticised the "new spirit" prevailing in Germany.

He said he felt strongly on that subject because for many years he had worked his hardest, and not without some success, to bring Germany back as an equal into the comity of nations. Now he saw all hopes, if not destroyed, at least adjourned and delayed by this new German spirit.

If Germany wanted the revision of treaties, she had got to convince the world that a reasonable re-adjustment of the treaties would satisfy her.

INFLAMMATORY SPEECHES.

As long as every speech made in Germany and every bit of their propaganda was menacing, inflammatory, biased and one-sided how could they expect that those whom they menaced, should disarm. If Germany reverted to her early mood, showing a real desire for the fulfilment of, and a real intention to observe her obligations, if she would cease to menace her neighbours, she would then assure the world that, in asking for disarmament from those who had not disarmed she was seeking her own security and not simply trying to reach a position in which she would be able to challenge any breach of the peace of the world.

SOVIET PEACE.

Capt. Anthony Eden, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replying to the discussion, said he felt confident that all parties in the House welcomed the outcome of the conversations between the Foreign Secretary and M. Litvinoff.

Referring to the adjournment of the Disarmament Conference, he said that this was really a change of method, since instead of proceeding by public discussion at Geneva, they were trying an interchange of views between the heads of delegations under the guidance of the President.

BOMBING QUESTION.

The question of bombing in outlying districts was, he said, one of the problems which would have to be dealt with when they came to the second reading of the draft convention. The policy of police bombing, he said, had been thoroughly examined for a considerable time and he was himself absolutely convinced that the conference appreciated the immense strength of the British case in respect of this reservation.

He was equally convinced that for the British Government not to have put this matter forward and explained their difficulties, would have been a dereliction of their responsibility in certain parts of the world.—British Wireless.

TUNNEL COLLAPSES

ELEVEN WORKMEN TRAPPED

Budapest, June 29. Eleven labourers were trapped when part of the quarry tunnel, near Pilsvoorschvar, collapsed as the result of a subterranean well caving in. Rescue squads are engaged in desperate efforts to extricate them but there is little hope of getting them out alive.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

JAPAN ASSAILED

FOREIGN DEBATE IN THE COMMONS

LANSBURY AND SANCTIONS

London, July 5.

International aid to assist China to put her house in order, Japan's policy in the Far East, and Britain's war debt to America, came under review during the debate in the House of Commons to-night on the Foreign Office estimates.

Mr. George Lansbury, the leader of the Opposition, confined himself to a severe criticism of Japan in her dealings with Manchuria and China. He asked who was engaged in protecting British interests in Manchukuo.

Mr. Lansbury also declared that Japan had torn up three treaties in blasting her way through Manchuria.

CHANGED VIEWS.

When the trouble began in the Far East, he went on, he felt a great sympathy with Japan and thought that the League of Nations was showing insufficient appreciation of the difficulties faced by Japan in view of the anarchical conditions prevailing in China, but as events went on, he had been forced to the conclusion that Japan was putting herself increasingly in the wrong.

The action of the Japanese militarists in Manchuria was irreconcilable with three solemn international engagements. He asked the Government whether the Lytton suggestion might not take the place of Manchukuo in reconciling the interests of Japan and the sovereignty of China.

LEAGUE'S POSITION.

Captain Anthony Eden, replying to Mr. Lansbury, declared that the League had no reason to feel ashamed of its record. It was not a super-State and could not go beyond its powers.

As regards an arms embargo in the Far East dispute, all countries did not possess equal legislative powers to enforce it and until they did, it was impossible to take steps to apply an arms embargo anywhere.

As regards British interests in Manchuria, there were consular officers there though there had been no recognition of Manchukuo.

DISARMAMENT.

As regards disarmament generally, Captain Eden admitted that there was a risk in signing a Disarmament Convention at the present time, but there was also a risk in failing to get an agreement on the Convention. It was necessary first to bring such an amendment to Europe as would give the nations sufficient confidence to sign the Convention.

That needed the assistance of the whole of Europe, particularly of those who complained of an inequality of status.

WAR DEBTS.

Sir John Simon, winding up the debate, referred to the war debt to the United States and said that the approaching negotiations, the exact date of which had not been fixed, would deal with the whole subject and not with any particular instalment.

President Roosevelt himself made that much clear when he asked

OPEN GOLF

Inspired Play by American

51 for 14 Holes and Then Breakdown

TOLLEY TO THE FOREFRONT

London, July 5.

Remarkably fine golf was witnessed at St. Andrew's to-day when the first round in the British Open Golf Championship competition proper was played.

Walter Hagen led the field with a brilliant 68, but very fine golf was also played by the famous amateur, Cyril Tolley, and the America Ryder Cup player, E. D. Dudley, both of whom turned in cards of seventy.

Dudley played inspired golf on the outward journey and must have beaten the course record had he maintained his brilliant accuracy on the return. After a 4 at the first hole and a five at the second, he reeled off a series of birdie figures and turned with a score of thirty-one.

Dudley was still five under fours up to the fourteenth hole, in other words with only four holes to play he had only taken 51 strokes. Then he broke down requiring nineteen for the last four holes.

His outward figures were: 4 5 3 4 3 4 2 3 3—31

PRINCE SPECTATOR.

The Prince of Wales watched Dudley's inspired period. His Royal Highness mingled with the onlookers passing about the course almost unrecognised.

The leaders are as follows: Walter Hagen (U.S.A.) 68 Cyril Tolley 70 E. D. Dudley (U.S.A.) 70 Fernie (Lytham) 70 Kolan (Portmarnock) 71 Jolley (Foxgrove) 71 Robertson (Dumfries) 71

OTHER CARDS.

Other scores, by the more notable contestants were:

Kirkwood 72 Saracen, holder (U.S.A.) 72 Dunlap (U.S.A. amateur) 72 Archie Compston 73 Ross Somerville (Canada) 73 Syd Easterbrook 73 Henry Cotton 73 Shute (U.S.A.) 73 Ernest Whitcombe 73 Abe Mitchell 74 Leo Diegel (U.S.A.) 75 Runyan (U.S.A.) 76 Olin Dutra (U.S.A.) 77 J. —Reuter.

The next Meeting of the Hongkong University Medical Society will be held on Monday, 10th July, 1933, at 6.10 p.m. in the Union Assembly Room, when Dr. Lewis Reid, M.C., M.B., F.R.C.S., will deliver a paper on "Recent Experimental Work Relating to Sound and Hearing."

Britain to make representations in Washington as soon as possible.

REVISION AIM.

The British Government would, said Sir John Simon, seek such revision of the existing agreement which would be compatible with the revival of prosperity.

The Conservative member, Mr. Nunn, expressed the opinion that China would welcome any friendly action to put her house in order and asked whether it was not possible for Britain, America, Japan and France to combine to get something done.—Reuter.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

WHAT IS BEAUTIFUL IS GOOD, AND WHO IS GOOD WILL SOON ALSO BE BEAUTIFUL.—Sappho.

The Commissioner of the St. John Ambulance Brigade begs to acknowledge with grateful thanks and appreciation the following donation:—Mr. Chau Man-chiu, $200.

The many friends of Dr. Bruno Hahn, Consul-General for Germany in Hongkong, will regret to hear that he is returning to Berlin to-morrow by the a.s. "Nordmark." Dr. Hahn who is now severing his connection with the Colony has been stationed here for the last four years, and previously represented his country in Russia. His successor is Mr. ... the German Consulate here some years ago.

One case of animal rabies, from Kowloon, was reported to the local health authorities on Tuesday.

The P. & O. liner Rajputana is arriving in the Colony on Wednesday next, according to schedule, and not on Monday as inadvertently stated yesterday. The a.s. Takada which is late, is arriving on Monday.

The following is the monthly return for June, of the St. John Ambulance New Territory Medical Benevolent Branch, showing the number of cases treated at each station:—Cheung Chow 1,888, Kan Tin 1,078, Shatin 795, Ho Fann 846, Shataukok 1,027, San Tin 992, Fanling 1,058, Tsin Wan 774, and Ting Kok 461. Of these, a total of 10,598 cases were treated, and there were twelve admissions to hospital.

AIR MAIL PLANS CLEARED UP

NO HONGKONG LINK YET

It is now clear that although the Pacific-American Airways are ready to link Hongkong with their Shanghai-Canton air mail scheme immediately permission has been obtained, the service will not be inaugurated on Saturday as indicated yesterday.

The announcement that Hongkong would be included in the service immediately was due to a misunderstanding. Mr. H. M. Bixby, vice-president of the Pacific-American Airways, explained last night.

Mr. Bixby pointed out that his statement that Hongkong would not be included in the initial flight but would be included after that flight was meant to convey that Hongkong would be linked at a later date and not on flights immediately following the inauguration. Hongkong's inclusion would only be possible when permission had been granted for them to make Hongkong a port of call. That permission was not yet forthcoming but he entertained the hope that the requisite permit would come in the near future.

He explained that Britain was a party to the International Air Convention and reciprocal agreements between other countries who were party to the Convention and Britain enabled planes of those countries to land on each other's soil. America took no part in this Convention and in view of this, special permission had to be obtained before an American plane could use British soil as a landing place. That was the position in Hongkong. Mr. Bixby also mentioned that for the time being only two round trips would be made weekly starting from Canton to-morrow and returning from Shanghai on the 11th. This was necessitated by reason of the fact that they had only two planes available. This scheme may be altered in the future but as to the certainty of that he could not say. It would depend on how their plans worked out under the present scheme.

Questioned concerning the passenger rates, Mr. Bixby stated that those arranged so far were only tentative as they were not certain of the actual mileage the route would entail. At present they had fixed the fares at $270 from Shanghai to Canton and $250 from Shanghai to Hongkong. In respect of a round trip there would be a reduction of 12½%, so that a flight from Shanghai to Hongkong-Shanghai would be $460 and from Shanghai-Canton-Shanghai $490.80.

The Sikorsky plane in which Mr. Bixby and other officials arrived here yesterday left for Canton this morning. They will leave Canton early to-morrow morning on the inaugural flight to Shanghai.

When inquiries were made at the Colonial Secretariat, it was stated: "We have received no word yet either from the Secretary of State or from the British Minister to China that a permit has been granted either to China National Airways to use Kai Tak as a port of call in an air mail service."

The official explained that negotiations were proceeding between British and Chinese interests for the conclusion of an agreement, the keynote of which would be reciprocity.

When this agreement was duly signed, sealed and delivered, British planes would be able to operate in China and planes of Chinese companies would be free to use Kai Tak.

COURT COMEDY

WOMAN, CHICKENS & AN UMBRELLA

A middle-aged Chinese woman, with babe in arms, figured in a brief comedy in the Central Police Court this morning. When her name was called to answer a charge of possession of tobacco on which duty had not been paid, the woman made her way from the back of the Court to the solicitor's table, which is in front of the dock. She was about to occupy a seat at the table, when the Court Sergeant directed her to stand.

The defendant carried with her two baskets of small chickens, beneath which the tobacco had been concealed. The woman, disclaimed the property with the exception of an old umbrella, which she grasped firmly. The woman said she carried the tobacco for a man. She was at first taken to a cell, but when no claim is made for the other

PO PIU LOTTERY OFFENCES

CHARGE AGAINST DR. QUASHED

Charges of keeping the second floor of 277, Queen's Road Central as a gaming house for po piu lottery, and possession of a number of tickets, were brought against Li Chau, unemployed, and Yam Wa, a broker, before Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning.

First defendant admitted writing tickets, and pleaded guilty to possession.

Mr. T. P. K. Kemble appeared for the second defendant. The Police withdrew the case, and he was discharged.

Detective-Sergeant Allen said the second defendant was merely present in the room at the time. He was not writing.

The case was adjourned until to-morrow.

DOCTOR DEFENDANT.

On a charge of the possession of 12 po piu tickets, a Chinese doctor stated he visited Macao to see a patient, and while there took the opportunity to purchase the tickets for himself.

Sub-inspector Kirby stated the tickets were in defendant's hand under a Panama hat. He held them thus while being searched in the charge room.

The magistrate accepted defendant's story and discharged him.

LEAGUE TENNIS RESULTS

The Hongkong Cricket Club were decidedly unlucky to lose to the South China first string in their important "A" Division tennis league match yesterday. C. A. Wright and R. H. Wild lost all three sets and this turned the result in favour of the Chinese who scrambled home by the odd set in nine.

The Club lacked the services of Denis Hazell, who is ill with influenza and this undoubtedly affected their chances of winning. Had he been supporting Wright, they would have assuredly secured the one set necessary for victory.

L. Goldman and A. L. Sullivan reformed an old partnership and carried off two sets whilst G. W. Sowell and H. Owen Hughes performed extremely well to win the other two.

Further smashing wins by the two C.R.C. teams were features of the results and with them and South China boasting 100 per cent. records, unusual interest will be attached to the championship this summer.

Details of the results follow:

THRILLING WIMBLEDON FINAL PROMISED

AUSTRALIAN BEATS SATOH IN FOUR SETS

MISS RYAN IN TWO SEMI-FINALS

London, July 5.
JACK CRAWFORD, the tall Australian champion, who is described as the finest stylist in the tennis world to-day, has won his way into the final of the Men's Singles championship at Wimbledon for the first time in his career, and on Saturday afternoon he will meet H. Ellsworth Vines, the holder.

Vines.

Crawford.

Crawford gave a brilliant display to beat Jiro Satoh, Japan's leading player, winning in four sets by scores of 6-3, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Vines played classic tennis against Henri Cochet, the French idol, and after one of the most spectacular matches of the tournament ran out winner by 6-2, 8-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Crawford, who ever since he started on the present European tour has been playing the best tennis of his career had no cake-walk against Satoh, but the Japanese was given fair warning of impending danger in the manner in which the Australian started.

Quickly finding his touch, Crawford opened up a powerful attack with withering drives to the corners. He timed his net approaches perfectly and in the first set was clearly the master of the situation. Satoh, having strokes into play, endeavoured to lure the Australian into errors, but Crawford was comparatively invulnerable, reducing his mistakes to the minimum.

ALWAYS THE MASTER.

Crawford played magnificently in the second set which he won to assure himself of victory. His long reach and quick anticipation enabled him to intercept Satoh's most powerful and accurate passing drives, and with crisp volleys, Crawford turned them into winning points.

Satoh had warned to his task by the time the first set had finished and the exchanges kept the spectators on tip-toes with excitement.

The Japanese tried desperately hard to break up Crawford's ground strokes by indulging in delicately executed drop shots and well-disguised angled half court shots, but the Australian treated the tactics with scant respect and used them as a weapon for himself.

Two sets up and Crawford allowed Satoh to take the initiative. The Japanese was not slow in accepting the opportunity and making frequent excursions to the net quickly captured the set.

COURTESY SET.

It was however, pretty well a courtesy set, for Crawford returned with all his early skill and speed to win the fourth set and match. Satoh, right on his mettle, refused to concede an inch without a fight, and the winner had to produce his best strokes to clinch the issue.

There was a dramatic atmosphere about the Vines-Cochet encounter for it has been freely expressed that this would be Cochet's last effort to "come-back" at Wimbledon.

Cochet himself played inspired tennis, but the amazing speed of the young American eventually triumphed over the ingenuity of the Frenchman.

DYNAMITE VINES.

There was dynamite in Vines' ground strokes and his overhead and volleying was equally as devastating. Cochet was as audacious as ever, attacking Vines on half-volley strokes which were the acme of skill. The Frenchman was constantly endeavouring to obtain sufficient command of the exchanges to force Vines on to the defence, but the holder countered with passing shots and lobs which continually sent Cochet back to the baseline.

Vines always held the upper hand in driving rallies his sliced forehand sailing over the net at a low trajectory and find the lines with unerring accuracy.

The best tennis was seen in the second and third sets. Cochet, in arrears, produced a barrage of masterly shots in a great effort to break through the American. It was touch and go, but Vines, keeping remarkably resourceful and steady under the attack, finally broke through at the fourth game.

Vines was content to ease up in the third set and Cochet won it without much difficulty, but the champion was again a world-beater in the fourth stanza. Cochet, by this time tired and deficient in stamina, offered but slight resistance and Vines went to his point losing only one game.

ANDREWS OUT.

E. D. Andrews and A. Stedman, the New Zealand combination, who on Tuesday so unexpectedly ousted the Australian pair, Quist and Turnbull, suffered defeat in the fourth round of the Men's Doubles, Von Cramm and Nourney the Germans entering the semi-final at their expense.

The "Tontons" turned the game definitely in their favour when they won the third set. It was bitterly contested going to sixteen games before a decision. But it was the New Zealanders' shot, their bolt and Cramm and Nourney captured the fourth set with little or no opposition.

The Germans had no easy task levelling up after losing the initial set. Andrews and Stedman, playing excellent tennis held on tenaciously and only conceded the set at the twelfth game.

LADIES DOUBLES.

Miss Kathleen Stammers and Mile. Jedrzajowska, neither of whom have realised expectations at this year's Wimbledon, fell victims to that champion couple Mme. Mathieu and Miss Ryan in the fourth round of the Women's Doubles.

The Franco-American pair were much too good for the Anglo-Polish combination, and in winning 6-1, 6-2 demonstrated a superiority which suggested that it would need a very

Gentlemen V Players Game Off

London, July 5.

The first Gentlemen v. Players cricket match of the season which should have started at the Oval to-day, has been cancelled owing to the difficulty experienced in raising teams.—Reuter.

The cancellation of a representative game such as this for the reason given above is most unusual. The reason can probably be found in the fact that in addition to a county programme of six matches, Oxford University are meeting the M.C.C. at Lord's, Yorkshire are entertaining the West Indies at Harrogate and Cambridge are playing H. D. G. Leveson-Gower's XI at Eastbourne.

None of the University players were available as their arranged matches are one of the variety conflict practices, and the rest of the amateurs are playing for the M. C. C. and Leveson-Gower's eleven.

C.A.A. NIGHT FETE.

First Meeting Of Season On Saturday.

OPEN RELAY RACE.

The Chinese Athletic Association's Bathing Pavilion at North Point, the last of the concrete swimming pavilions to be opened this season, will be the stage for the Association's first swimming night fete on next Saturday evening.

Among the events in a highly interesting programme is a 150 metres relay race (each fifty metres, back, breast and free styles), open to the Colony. Entries for this event are fixed and those intending to participate are requested to send in their entries to the swimming secretary of the C.A.A., Mr. Lo G. Hin, of Singer Sewing Machine Company in Pedder Building.

The prizes for all events will be distributed at the conclusion of the meeting by Mr. Chan Lim-pak, the donor.

The programme opens at 7.30 p.m.

British Empire Games

LONDON'S AUGUST ATTRACTION

London.
The biggest gathering of women athletes ever known is to take place in London in August, 1934, when the British Empire Games are held here, as well as the Women's World Games.

Events for women are to be included in the Empire Games and representatives from every part of the Empire are expected. When the first British Empire Games were held at Hamilton, Canada, in 1930, no women competed.

For the World Games 250 women athletes will gather, coming from 25 different countries.

strong couple to prevent them from winning the title.

Mme. Mathieu and Miss Ryan joined Miss James and Miss Yorkie in the semi-final.

Miss Ryan found herself in another semi-final bracket during the day, when she and E. Maier, the Spaniard, holders of the Mixed Doubles championship, beat R. Nunol and Miss Noel in straight sets.

PLUCKY FIGHT.

The Anglo-Japanese pair put up a very plucky fight. Nunol did the work of two, and frequently left his opponents standing with spectacular middle-court smashes and cunning drop shots.

The other Anglo-Japanese partnership, Miki and Miss Dorothy Round secured a place in the last four when they scored a brilliant victory over P. D. Turnbull and Miss Helen Jacobs.

The winners carried off the first set with ridiculous ease, and Turnbull and Miss Jacobs responded in like fashion in the second. Any idea, however, that the final set would be a close affair was quickly destroyed, Miki and Miss Round making light of their task.

The day's results as cabled by Reuter were:

JUST A BOXING TOURNAMENT

MAN WITH BLACK EYE IN COURT

"It was an ordinary boxing tournament," said Sub-Inspector Kirby in describing a fight between two Chinese who were brought before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning. They were caught fighting in Sai Street by an Indian Sergeant who was attracted by a crowd.

The second man had a bad black eye.

Mr. Wynne-Jones—He is liable to get that if he goes in for boxing tournaments.

Defendants were fined $3 each and were bound over.

HAWKING MORE PROFITABLE

WHY CHINESE COOLIES WON'T WORK

A Chinese woman, on a charge for hawking without a licence, stated she could not find work as an earth cooler.

Mr. Wynne-Jones—I don't believe you. There is more building going on in the Colony now than there ever was. It is most extraordinary that with all the building work, these people cannot find work.

Sub-Ins. Kirby—They apparently make more money hawking. A.S.I. Sabey—It is easier for them to hawk than to build. Defendant was cautioned.

CULTIVATION OF SUGARCANE

NEW ENTERPRISE BY MADRAS GOVT.

Expansion in India Inevitable

Ellore. The Madras Government, it is understood, will start an organization for aiding the exploitation of the resources of sugarcane cultivation. It is to be known as the Cooperative and Industrial Credit Society, among the objects of which are the teaching of improved methods of sugarcane cultivation and the giving of advances for the said cultivation.

As regards public enterprise, it is announced that a company called the "India Sugar and Refineries Ltd." with the Raja of Bobbili, Chief Minister, and others as directors and with an authorized capital of Rs. 20,000,000 will soon be started. The company's factory will be located at Hospet in the Bellary District. The factory will be equipped on up-to-date lines and will have an initial capacity for crushing over 400 tons of sugarcane a day.

The Indian Tariff Board on sugar had reported that "the expansion of the sugar industry in India is an inevitable adjunct to agricultural development." It is therefore natural that Government as well as public enterprise have been showing some activity in this direction.

The annual import of foreign sugar into India is stated to be about one million tons and barely a fifth of the total quantity is manufactured in India, though the country abounds in the raw material necessary for the industry.—Reuter.

ADMIRAL STANDLEY'S APPOINTMENT

Chief of American Naval Operations

Washington, July 1.

Admiral William Harrison Standley to-day assumed the post of chief of naval operations, succeeding Admiral William V. Pratt, who retired from that post yesterday after 47 years in service in the navy.

Standley, an ensign during the Spanish-American war and a captain during the world war, is a veteran of almost as long experience, beginning with his graduation from Annapolis in 1895.

The new chief of staff was recently commander of cruisers, with the rank of vice-admiral, and now holds the rank of full admiral.

RECORD HOT DAY IN AMERICA

New York, June 30.

There was another record-breaking hot day yesterday, when the hottest of June weather was experienced all over the country. There is promise of relief, however, in some of the states in the middle west, while the weather man told others that it would grow still warmer.

Rain fell in some sections, and cool areas over northwestern Canada may bring definite relief by the week-end.

Seven deaths were caused from this latest heat wave in the state of Michigan, six in Ohio and two in Indiana.—Reuter.

PRINCE IN GOLF SEMI-FINAL

BEATS LADY ASTOR IN PARLIAMENTARY MATCH

London, June 30.

At Walton Heath, to-day, the Prince of Wales beat Lady Astor by two up and one to play in the semi-final of the Parliamentary golf handicap.

The Prince, whose handicap is eleven, had to concede Lady Astor a special handicap of 20 (seven strokes in an 18-hole match). In the final, he will meet either Sir Arthur Steel Maitland or Mr.

WOMAN REIGNS SUPREME

"SEIGNEUR" OF A FEUDAL STATE

PRESENTS DAUGHTER AS DEBUTANTE

London.

One of the most romantic figures at this year's Courts was Mrs. Robert Hathaway, Dame of Sark, who came to London to present her debutante daughter and daughter-in-law.

At home, on her island, Mrs. Hathaway reigns supreme. She is the "Seigneur" of the only independent feudal state within the Empire.

A charter granted to her ancestors by Queen Elizabeth endows her with all the rights and privileges enjoyed by the feudal barons of medieval times.

Over the Parliament, which consists of the "Seigneurs" or heads of each of the 40 land-owning families of the island, she has the power of a King. She opens it herself and she can veto any law it passes. She can also forbid the sale of any land.

In accordance with ancient feudal law, every man on the island owes her two days' work a year. If he does not wish to do it himself, he must provide a substitute. In the same way, anyone possessing a horse and cart is obliged to lend them to the community, free of charge, for two days in the year.

STRANGERS TAXED.

A poll-tax of a shilling is levied on every stranger who lands on the island—but that does not go to augment the "Seigneur's" income. She is putting it into a fund to build a better harbour—which, it is estimated, will cost some £10,000. All Mrs. Hathaway's seven hundred subjects speak English when addressing visitors, but when they talk among themselves they speak a dialect which resembles closely the language spoken by William the Conqueror and the Barons who accompanied him to England in 1066.

Even licensing laws come within the jurisdiction of the Seigneur, with the result that the islanders are free to enjoy uninterrupted drinks from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. There are no restrictions on the sale of drinks in hotels and Scotch whisky may be had for 8s. 6d. a bottle.—Reuter.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET IRREGULAR

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was irregular yesterday. Business done 5,800,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—The market closed irregular after a late rally in rails due to bullish news which pulled the list up from a decline earlier in the day. The "Iron-ore Magazine" report is delayed and will be circulated to-morrow.

Cable received from Swan, Culbertson and Fritz (New York): The market closed off on realizing but rails came forward in a manner which indicates an early resumption of advance. Wheat was higher earlier in the day due to reports that drought deterioration continues but later eased off on account of profit-taking. Cotton: Diversion of the course of the tropical storm towards West Texas with probable rains in the drought section, causing sterling and continued uncertainty of the curtailment plan accentuated heavy early selling. Cable received at 11.44 p.m. during our night service from Swan, Culbertson, Fritz, New York. After possible temporary reaction stocks are most likely to renew advance. Cotton responds poorly to Liverpool Southern selling. Wheat appears to be a "buy" on this dip. Crop news bad.

WOMAN PIRATE IN COURT

ALLEGED SWEETHEART OF NOTORIOUS LEADER

Shanghai, July 1. Suspected of being a member of the notorious Taihu pirate gang under Tai Pao Ah-shu, who was executed by the Chinese authorities year before last, Chang Wu-sze, alias Wong Pa-mei, a 30-years old woman arrested by officers of Bubbling Well Station in a Hart Road house on Thursday afternoon, was handed over to a representative of the Kiangsu Provincial Water Police by order of Judge Ng in the First Special District Court yesterday morning.

According to the representative of the Provincial Water Police, the prisoner was implicated by four pirates already taken into custody at Soochow and was alleged to have secretly transported firearms for the marauders who some time ago held up a steamer near the Taihu Lake and looted it of notes and jewels valued at a considerable sum of money.

Evidence against the prisoner was produced in Court by the Water Police representative in the form of a photograph of the prisoner which was seized recently by the water police on a pirates' boat. A duplicate of this photograph was found by the Municipal Police in the raid upon the prisoner's house on Thursday, thus establishing the fact that the woman was the one wanted by the extra-settlement authorities.

CHIEF'S SWEETHEART.

A formal application for the prisoner's extradition was then made by the representative who

PROHIBITION A HERESY

"OBFUSCATION OF HUMAN SPIRIT"

London, June 30. Prohibition was "a terrible heresy and a gloomy obfuscation of the human spirit," declared M. Sarraut, one of the French delegates, during the course of a discussion on wine in the sub-committee of the World Economic Conference.

He advocated limitation of production, but said that the world was suffering from grave under-consumption of wine owing to certain dark countries "sinking into the dark night of prohibition" and anti-liquor

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Murder at a football game! While 70,000 spectators look on, a boy dies on the field, and no one sees who killed him! That is the dramatic situation which serves as the basis for "70,000 Witnesses," the mystery melodrama which opens to-day at the Queen's Theatre.

The film is unusual and exciting. Built up from its uniquely dramatic basis to a breath-taking climax, it deserves to stand high among both football pictures and mystery thrillers. The fatal game, which results in the death of the star half-back of the State team, is thrilling in itself, and then, from the moment the boy staggers and drops as he is about to make a touchdown for State, the film assumes the note of sinister excitement which surrounds the solution of a particularly baffling mystery.

Walter Clark (Johnny Mack Brown) is the boy who is killed. Because of his strange actions during the game, suspicion is directed toward Buck Buchanan (Phillips Holmes), quarterback of the team and Walter's best friend. Buck, moreover, is known to be the brother of Slip Buchanan (Lew Cody), notorious gambler, who finds it to his interest to have University win the game. But in spite of circumstantial evidence, Detective McKenna (David Landau), Clark's sister (Dorothy Jordan), and others interested in the case do not believe that Buck is guilty. Both Clark's murderer and the manner of his death remain a mystery until the film reaches a sensational denouement with the repetition of the fatal game, play by play.

"Too Busy To Work."

Because he was not required to wear evening clothes, high hats, powdered wig, or other trapping in the production of "Too Busy To Work," Will Rogers enjoyed making it. It is the attraction at the King's Theatre next Sunday.

Rogers dislikes to "dress up" and in his daily life wears the most ordinary clothes. A pair of well worn trousers, a mole-skin jumper and a white shirt minus necktie, constitute his most frequently worn outfit. He does not own a dress suit and, at public functions, his attire is invariably a blue serge business suit.

In "Too Busy To Work," he appears as a vagabond wanderer and wears a costume that fits both the role and his personality.

"Too Busy To Work" is based on a story by Ben Ames Williams and deals with the adventures of a penniless, happy-go-lucky tramp who either walks, or dies the brake beams of freight cars, from place to place in search of his daughter who disappeared while he was fighting at the front. The child, now a young woman, accompanies her mother when she runs away with a man in more affluent circumstances. The mother dies and the girl becomes the head of her foster father's household and falls in love with his son.

There is pathos in many of the situations in the picture, but Rogers is said to have ample opportunity for introducing the brand of comedy for which he is famous. Marian Nixon shares the love interest with Dick Powell, a recent discovery whose only previous picture role was in "Blessed Event."

"The Half Naked Truth"

Jackie, 180 pounds of five-year-old lion, was the most respected actor during the production of "The Half Naked Truth" showing at the Central Theatre to-day only. Lee Tracy, Lupe Velez, Eugene Palette, Frank Morgan and Shirley Chambers may actually have been enacting the featured roles, but Jackie held the respect of the troupe with his giant claws and menacing teeth.

The lion, claimed by Trainer Melvin Koontz to be as gentle as a kitten, has worked in motion pictures since childhood. He was born at Selig Zoo in Los Angeles, which specializes in producing and training motion picture animals.

"She Done Him Wrong"

Mae West has occupied a unique position ever since she first burst, sensationally, on the Broadway horizon, as writer and producer as well as actress. Now she seems on the way to occupying a similar place in pictures.

"She Done Him Wrong," which opens on Sunday at the Queen's is ample evidence of the inroad Miss West has already made in the film business. It is her first starring vehicle, her first picture, in fact, except for a bit in "Night After Night," and both story and dialogue are of her authorship. The entire film bears the mark of her individuality.

"She Done Him Wrong," is a story of the Bowery, with Miss West in the role of the voluptuous Lady Lou, who sings at Jordan's Diamond Palace and makes diamonds her career. She judges her men by the diamonds they can give her, and doesn't question where the diamonds come from.

Cary Grant adds materially to his stature as an actor by his performance as Cummings. Noah Berry and Moore, too, contribute priceless characterizations, and the supporting cast includes such astute players as Gilbert Roland, David Landau, Rochelle Hudson, Rafaela Ottiano, Grace LaRue, Fuzzy Knight, and Tammy Young.

"The Painted Woman"

Spencer Tracy is co-featured with Peggy Shannon in "The Painted Woman," the Fox dramatic photoplay, opening to-day at the King's Theatre. In "The Painted Woman," Tracy plays the role of a roving soldier of fortune who has been all over the seven seas and tried his hand at everything, winding up as the skipper of a little pearling schooner. In addition to Miss Shannon, the cast includes William (Stage) Boyd, Irving Pichel, Herbert Mundin, Rual Roulsen, and Laska Winters, John Blystone directed.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Several years ago we were led to believe that there was little or no similarity between any of the bidding systems at contract, but to-day with the principles of constructive bidding being adopted by practically every system the confusion of systems has been practically eliminated.

This is well proved by the fact that experts throughout the country are to-day getting a great deal of enjoyment out of the individual duplicate tournaments. This is a movement wherein every player in a section plays with every other player as a partner once and as an opponent twice. At the end of the tournament there is only one winner.

To those who enjoy squeeze plays and can recognize them in actual competition, the following hand proved a real thrill in the recent Ohio State Individual Contract Tournament.

The Bidding

Mr. Frank H. Grace of Cleveland, sitting in the South, opened the bidding with one heart. This was very gratifying to West, who passed. North, feeling that his diamond suit was a little too weak to bid on the first round, responded with two clubs.

Mr. Grace made a slam try bid of three no trump. North bid four diamonds and Mr. Grace lost no time in getting into six no trump.

The Play

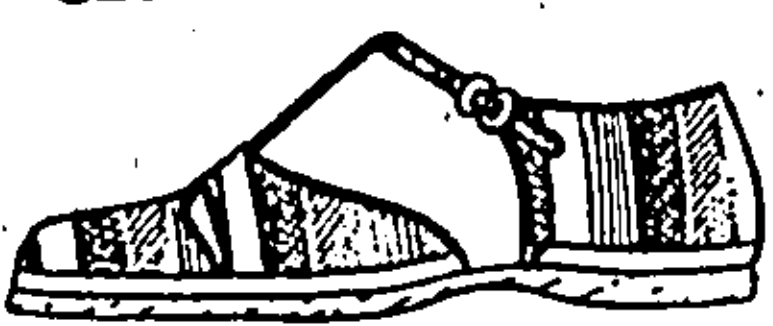

The queen of spades was opened by West, South winning with the ace and leading a club, which was won in dummy with the queen.

A small diamond was played and the queen finessed. When it held, the ace was played, followed by the deuce, West discarding a heart and East winning the trick with the king.

East returned the eight of spades, West played the ten, forcing North to win with the king. Dummy's two good diamonds were cashed, East discarding two clubs, declarer discarding two hearts and West discarding two spades. The ace of clubs was then cashed, West discarding a heart.

The declarer was down to the ace, king and nine of hearts and a small spade. West held the jack of spades and three hearts to the queen. The king of clubs was led from dummy, declarer discarding the four of spades, and West was squeezed. If he dropped the jack of spades, dummy's nine would be good, while if he discarded a heart, the declarer won the last three tricks in his own hand with the ace, king and nine of hearts.

GARAGE MANAGER IN COURT

FINED FOR WRONGFUL PETROL STORAGE

For storing 24 gallons of petrol in a place other than specified in his licence, Yuen Po-shung, the manager of the Mongkok Garage was fined $25 by Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning.

Mr. J. C. Fitzhenry of the Fire Brigade said defendant was authorised to store 500 gallons of petrol in a pump in the garage, but on June 13 he was found to have 24 gallons stored next to the office.

Mr. H. L. Decker of the Texas Company explained that on May 4 he was informed that the defendant's pump was leaking, but he had it fixed up on the same day. He had received no more complaints about the pump, which was tested recently, but even if it did leak, it was only a very slight one.

A REMINDER

DEFENDANT AND A PREVIOUS OFFENCE

A Chinese, employed as store coolie in the provision department of Messrs. Lane, Crawford, who yesterday denied a previous conviction for theft in 1907, this morning remembered it when Inspector Vincent, in charge of criminal records, gave evidence of proof.

Insp. Vincent told his Worship (Mr. Wynne-Jones) that defendant had a black mole on the right eye and a scar in front of the right ear, both of which were there in 1907.

On the charge of theft of two tins of Gold Flake cigarettes from his employers, to which he pleaded guilty, the defendant was sentenced to three weeks' hard labour.

"RUINED" SUITS CLAIM

FISCHER ACTION RESUMED

The hearing was resumed at the Supreme Court to-day of a claim by Mr. W. G. Fischer, of Reuter, Brockmann, and Co., and a well-known local amateur jockey, for $414.70 from the International Dry Cleaning Co., in respect of suits which he alleged they had "ruined."

In his statement of claim, plaintiff said he sent four tweed suits and one palm beach suit to be dry-cleaned but defendants had negligently washed them in soap and water with the result that they had lost their shape and texture and the colours had been spoiled.

Mr. W. J. Armstrong of Messrs. Deacons, represented plaintiff, and Mr. J. B. Frantis, of Hastings and Co., appeared for the defence.

Cross-examined to-day Mr. W. W. Hirst, called as an expert witness, said he had 12 years' experience in dry-cleaning but had no knowledge of the gasoline process. It was, however, very similar to cleaning by benzol and he based his evidence on that fact. He denied that defendants were "competitors" as they were "not in the same category."

Mr. Prentis: Is it true that defendants are dry-cleaners to His Excellency the Governor?

Witness: Yes, they recently obtained the contract. I know a lot about that, but unfortunately I cannot bring it out.

Evidence was given by the head cleaner of defendant firm that he personally cleaned the clothes in gasoline.

The case is proceeding.

Rev. G. K. Carpenter has been appointed honorary chaplain to the Forces (C.E.) with effect from 10th vice Rev. A. D. Stewart, who will shortly leave the Colony.

FATHER ADVISED TO CANE SON

SCHOOLBOY ACCUSED OF LYING

Police are searching for a Portuguese youth who is alleged to have stolen a radiator cap from a car parked in Statue Square on Tuesday night. At the time of his escape, a Chinese school boy, Kan Lok Chuen, was arrested by an A. A. Chinese watchman, when seen standing by an Austin Seven car, with a switch in his hand. The switch had been taken from the Austin, and the radiator cap with which the smaller of the two lads ran away, was stolen from another car in the line.

Detective-Sergeant Fowle brought the school boy before Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning. The lad denied stealing, and in answer to a charge of receiving, said he did not know the switch was stolen.

Defendant's father was in Court. Addressing him, the magistrate said that what his son had said was an obvious lie. "I advise you to give him a good caning. It is your responsibility," said his Worship.

Det. Sergt. Fowle said the Portuguese youth was known to the Police and they were trying to locate him. Both lads had apparently been swimming off Murray Pier.
